THOUSAND DIE IN TURKISH QUAKE

Most of Country Is Shaken and Probably 5,000 Persons Injured

TOWNS DESTROYED BY FIRE

Details of Disaster Meager Because of Interruption of the Wires

CONSTANTINOPLE, Aug. 11—Reports here today indicate that the gerat earthquake which was felt through a large part of Turkey was accompanied by much heavier loss of life than those at first stated The newspapers today estimate the number of victims at 1 000 killed and the injured are said to number from 5,000 to 6,000

Details of the earthquake which are coming in slowly owing to the interruption of the wires indicates that the seismic disturbances were widespread Several hundred persons have been killed thousands are homeless and outbreaks of fire have occurred in many towns and villages

The entire district between Constantinople and Adrianople felt the shock severely Fugitives from Myriofito report 00 killed and 600 injured The town was still burning when they left Ganoshera has been wiped out 50 persons being killed and wounded The wrecked buildings took fire and most of them were burned Shar-Koi was destroyed and two nearby villages were engulfed Adrianople suffered little damage but Rodosto was partly destroyed by the earthquake and fire

People Camping in Fields.

The majority of the houses in the Gallipoli are in ruins and the people camping in the fields. Tchanak-Kalessi is in an equally bad plight

Warships anchored in the Dardanelles felt the shock severely. It was at first attributed to Italian torpedo boats

[illegible] captain of the American steamer Virginia reports that the lighthouse at [illegible] in the Sea of Marmora has disappeared and that the villages in the surrounding country are in flames [illegible] was unable to [illegible] assistance to the violent movement of the sea

Gallipoli lies 13 miles west of here and the town of Tchanak-Kalessi and [illegible] are at the narrowest part of the Dardanelles

Relief Ships on Way

The villages on the Sea of Marmora suffered greatly and many inhabitants were killed or injured A considerable number of the injured have arrived here for treatment

The inhabitants of several villages are homeless and without food A special steamer has been chartered and a torpedo boat has been ordered to go to their relief

Gallipoli is at the exit from the Dardanelles to the Sea of Marmora It formerly was of some importance but its population has dwindled from 100 000 to less than 0 000 The town of Tchanak-Kalessi which has about 10 000 inhabitants is on the Asia Minor side of the Dardanelles

SENTIMENT AGAINST MACHINE INCREASES

Precinct Canvass Shows Overwhelming Support of Progressive Movement

The strength of progressive anti-machine sentiment within the Republican party in Colorado Springs was [illegible] illustrated yesterday [illegible] petitions of candidates for [illegible] committeemen and women representing the progressive wing of the party [illegible] the office of the county [illegible]

Despite the [illegible] in which it was necessary to conduct the work petitions were circulated and the necessary number of signatures obtained all of whom attested by notaries as required by law in about 20 of the 29 precincts of the city and the sentiment found on all sides by those who circulated the petitions was so overwhelmingly in support of the progressive movement that many times the number of signatures required could have been easily obtained

Eager to Sign Petition

In one precinct, where a comparatively thorough canvass for signatures was made two-thirds of the entire Republican vote of the precinct went on the petitions for committeeman and committeewoman, and the entire precinct was not covered at that and throughout the city generally the Republican voters were not only willing but anxious to show openly their opposition to the machine by signing the petitions

On every hand was found the sentiment that the Republican party in the county as well as the state should be made the party of the people and that this is the time for reform and moreover that every Republican owes it to his party and himself to lend active aid to take control of the party once and forever out of the hands of a corporation controlled machine

How true this is is well indicated by the character of the men and women who have entered the fight by becoming petition candidates for committeemen and women against the candidates named by the assembly in which the Progressives declined to take part It is safe to say that no stronger more representative or more able list of citizens ever made up the personnel of a Republican county central committee in this county and nothing better exemplifies the strength that is behind the Progressive movement than the candidates whom Republican voters will have a chance to place in power at the September primaries

Many Strong Candidates

In Colorado City and in many of the outlying and country precincts other strong candidates have been named, and throughout the county the Republican voters will have an opportunity to register their emphatic protest against a continuance of machine domination of the party A partial list of the "Progressive" candidates for committee places follows

Ward 1 Precinct 1 John L Bennett, Mrs Lillian Kerr

Ward 1 Precinct 3—George M Howe Mrs Helen K Williams

Ward 1 Precinct 4—D S Neville, Mrs W H Green

Ward 2 Precinct 1 T P Barber Mrs Emma Eldredge

Ward 2 Precinct 2—O I Burch Mrs Alma L Graves

Ward Precinct 2—D B Anderson Mrs Emma Minier

CHARGES RAIDERS WERE FEDERALS

Orozco Blames Government for Sierra Blanca Incident, but Assertion Is Denied

EL PASO Tex Aug 10—No reports of further rancho raids on the international boundary southeast of here has been received along the G H and S A railway Col E Z Steever in command at Fort Bliss said tonight that reports today from the cavalry and infantry which was strung along the border at the first alarm made known no more intrusions on American soil, Colonel Steever was inclined to believe the first reports to be exaggerated However a troop of the Third cavalry was sent today from Fort Sam Houston to Sierra Blanca Tex This makes two cavalry troops and two companies infantry on patrol duty

Gen Pascual Orozco rebel commander in-chief at Juarez Mex declared today that the 200 men who stole horses on the American side [illegible] of Sierra Blanca yesterday were a group of federal volunteers He says [illegible] scouting party of rebels sent out [illegible] met this body and had a brush fight without fatalities yesterday This promptly was denied federals who claim the men are [illegible] being pursued by a party [illegible]

SECRETARY KNOX TO EMPEROR'S FUNERAL

Will Start for Japan Thursday to Cross to Yokohama on Cruiser Pennsylvania

WASHINGTON, Aug 10—Secretary Knox today was designated by President Taft a special representative of the United States at the funeral of Mutsuhito the late emperor of Japan and will leave Washington for San Francisco and the orient next Thursday The funeral will be held September 12 Mr Knox is expected back in this country in October

Secretary Knox and his party will leave Washington next Thursday and depart from Seattle on the cruiser Pennsylvania immediately upon arrival The ship will steam direct to Yokohama It was admitted at the state department today that while in Japan Mr Knox would talk with Viscount Uchida minister of foreign affairs The viscount formerly was ambassador at Washington

A rear admiral of the navy and either a major general or a brigadier general of the army probably will be assigned as aides to Mr Knox

R. S Miller chief of the division of far eastern affairs of the state department probably will act as his secretary Mrs Knox will accompany her husband

President Taft let it be known that he wished Mr Knox to attend the emperor's funeral to show the friendliness of the United States to Japan and its people

Secretary Knox's mission will be performed at a time when at least one question of much interest to the United States is pending in the far east It is the case of the Korean missionaries in which several Americans have been accused by natives of having been implicated in a plot to assassinate the governor general of Korea So far no official correspondence is known to have passed between the two countries on the subject though it is one of grave interest The recently reported understanding between Japan and Russia to govern their attitude toward China also makes Mr Knox's visit to Japan a timely one

SOCIALISTS AND POLICE IN MIXUP

PITTSBURG Aug 10—A number of persons were injured slightly, and more than [illegible] arrested here late tonight in a clash between Socialists and policemen

The trouble occurred when Socialists for the second time within eight days attempted to hold a street meeting for which a permit had not been issued As the speakers mounted an improvised stage and attempted to address the audience they were grasped by the police and sent to a nearby station

Meanwhile the crowd became dense and a call was sent in for additional police A mounted squad reached the scene in a few minutes and [illegible] Several persons were injured in the mixup

DENVER GIRL IS BRUTALLY SLAIN

Crime Is Identical With Several Committed Near That Place Recently

DENVER Aug 10—Is Denver harboring a "Modern Jack the Ripper" who has picked this field to perpetrate crimes rivalling in atrocity the White chapel murders?

Chief of Police L H O Neil is inclined to this belief since the murder last night of Miss Signea Carlzen in Aurora a suburb of Denver Her mutilated body was found this morning and a police dragnet has been thrown out over the city tonight to apprehend every suspicious character.

The murder of Miss Carlzen has focused police attention upon a half-dozen crimes, similar in many respects which have been perpetrated in Denver or its suburbs within six months While in not all cases were the victims murdered the manner of attack at the inception of the assaults has been discovered by the police to be identical

Father Predicted Her Death

Sven M Carlzen father of the young woman who has been living apart from his family 10 years declared today that he had recently read his daughter's hand and had told her that her death would come within a specified period and that her end would be brutal He declared he based the assertion upon palmistry, of which he is a student

Olga Kaiser a 12-year-old girl daughter of a dairyman living in the vicinity of the murder, today declared that she had been accosted by a man every evening about dusk, and that his manner indicated that he was laboring under a heavy mental strain A suspect arrested today was released tonight

Miss Carlzen was assaulted and brutally murdered last night while on her way home from giving a public piano music lesson Her skull was crushed a stocking taken from her limb was wrapped tightly about her throat and her body horribly mutilated with a knife

PROGRESSIVES FILE COMPLETE TICKET

Number of Changes From One Named Originally by Workers Within Party

DENVER Aug 10—The Republican Progressives within the party today filed a complete state and county ticket with Secretary of State James B Pearce The ticket as filed by petition has many changes from the one named originally and [illegible]

United States senator long term—Merle D Vincent Delta county

Congressman at-large—L J Stark Denver Clarence P Dodge El Paso

Congressman Second district Dr Vanbuskirk, Otero

Lieutenant governor Dr Robert Davenport Las Animas

Secretary of state—Ernest C Brown Ouray

Regents state university—Dr O J Pfeiffer, Denver E P Smith Delta

James H Brown of Denver individually filed a petition for the short term as United States senator Leaders of the Progressives within the party today declared that Mr. Brown's candidacy would be acceptable to them and that he would be supported if nominated at the primaries

Secretary of State Pearce kept his office open until midnight to handle the deluge of petitions of candidates

OHIO PROGRESSIVES TO NAME A TICKET

COLUMBUS Aug 10—Following the nomination of Gen R P Brown of Zanesville for governor at a meeting today of the Republican state committee, eight members of that body, led by State Chairman Walter F Brown and Secretary I M Foster resigned Walter Brown also gave notice of his resignation as a member of the Republican national committee for Ohio. The meeting was called to fill a vacancy caused by the refusal of Judge E B Dillon to make the gubernatorial race The Roosevelt members centered their strength on United States District Attorney I Grant Denman of Cleveland The vote in committee resulted Brown 11 Denman, 8 two of the Roosevelt members were absent

Following the split Walter Brown and their supporters of Colonel Roosevelt said they expected [illegible] complete Progressive state ticket would be placed in the field at [illegible]

DEMAND HEARING ON PANAMA CANAL BILL

Civic Bodies in Shipbuilding Centers Oppose Registry of Foreign Built Ships

WASHINGTON Aug 10—President Taft told several callers today that he expected to sign the Panama canal bill passed by the senate yesterday [illegible] its provisions against the use of the canal by railroad owned ships and granting free tolls to American vessels The president is said to have declared that some of the provisions of the measure did not meet with his views entirely but that he expects to approve it

Railroad and legal experts in congress hold the view that the senate had [illegible] a highly important extension of the power of the interstate commerce commission in adopting the Bourne amendment to the canal bill

The provision would authorize the commission to divorce competing railroads and steamship lines wherever they were found to operate to the detriment of the public and would extend powers of regulation over water routes

Such control has long been desired by the commission but the water lines have never conceded the right to the commission to supervise their business or their relations with the railroads

Little difficulty is anticipated in reconciling the differences between the senate and the house on the bill

Protests From Shipbuilding Centers

That the Panama measure will not pass to final enactment without a further fight against the amendment permitting American registry for foreign-built ships owned by Americans was indicated late today when telegrams of protest were received from the New [illegible] News chamber of commerce and other civic bodies in shipbuilding centers The telegrams demand a full hearing before action is taken The amendment put into the bill by the senate opens the way to American owners of foreign-built ships to enjoy the privileges of American registry provided they keep their ships exclusively in the trade to and from foreign ports

It is understood many house members are demanding that if foreign-built ships are permitted to fly the American flag congress shall also pass a law permitting the importation without tariff duty of material used in the building of ships in American yards This demand has frequently been before congress

The cost of manufacturing ships in the United States is much higher than in foreign shipyards and it is claimed conditions would be made somewhat equalized if [illegible] foreign materials could be imported without the payment of tariff

MEXICO BLAMES NEW MEXICO SENATOR

Believes Orozco Repudiated Peace Overtures Because of American's Speech

AIRS VIEWS IN STATEMENT

Practically All Hope of Negotiating Terms With Rebels Abandoned

MEXICO CITY Aug [illegible] Mexico blames Senator Fall of New Mexico for its failure to come to [illegible] General Pascual [illegible] President Madero [illegible] conclusion today [illegible] principally upon reports [illegible] government agents [illegible] made his views known in a statement issued [illegible] [illegible] terms with [illegible] Hernandez [illegible] Orozco [illegible]

It is understood here that government agents at El Paso reported that Senator Fall played more than a passive part in frightening Orozco off Just what action was taken the government does not pretend to know but it is intimated he might have communicated directly with Orozco sentiments expressed in his recent speech in the senate on the Mexican situation

Mentions Fall's Name

It seems that Orozco had accepted the conditions says the official statement "when he [illegible] and without a known motive changed his action completely. There is no official about this change but from reports that have been received it seems that the determination of Orozco was influenced by the efforts of an American senator A B Fall who lately delivered a speech [illegible] the Mexican government"

Senator Fall had demanded that Orozco be held personally responsible to the United States for acts committed against Americans

Same Offer to Other Leaders

A feature in the negotiations which came to light today is that Rafael Hernandez had been authorized to extend to Salazar Campa Rojas and other leaders the same conditions as were offered to Orozco

Jesus Flores Magon [illegible] said tonight [illegible] who [illegible] He said when Orozco [illegible] sent a message saying he would be glad to confer with him After [illegible] Hernandez reported that Orozco said he would surrender if his troops lay down their arms [illegible] Madero [illegible] which [illegible] to [illegible] place upon these [illegible]

A FIGHT WORTH WHILE, SAYS T. R.

NEW ERA IN POLITICAL HISTORY OPENING

Progressive Party's Policies Include All Good Points of Recent Years

OYSTER BAY N Y Aug 10 Win or lose it's a fight worth [illegible] said Colonel Roosevelt today What ever the outcome of the [illegible] which is now opening it is his opinion that a new era in American political history will be dated from the Progressive convention held in Chicago this week

For more than 40 years the former president said sporadic reform movements have come into existence many of them in the west He cited Bryan's campaign of 1896 and the Populist movement as examples Most of them he continued had contained something good but were coupled with quack remedies worse than the disease they were supposed to cure The good points of them all he said had been gathered together in the Progressive party's policies and for the first time there was given to the country these ideas without the accompaniment of what might be termed preposterous declarations which would make it impossible for sane men to follow The work of organizing said Colonel Roosevelt had gone far more rapidly than he had thought possible

The Progressive party stand on the tariff Colonel Roosevelt believes will be a source of great strength Some one had expressed the view [illegible] saying him that the Republican tariff was a tariff for privilege [illegible]

SULLIVAN AGREES TO TELL ALL HE KNOWS ABOUT POLICE GRAFT

NEW YORK, Aug. 10.—"Jack" Sullivan, under arrest in connection with the murder of Herman Rosenthal, promised today that he would go to District Attorney Whitman's office Monday and tell all he knew about the alleged connection of Police Lieutenant Becker with the murder. Sullivan made this agreement with Assistant District Attorney Smith. Sullivan said to Smith that he had seen Becker in conversation with "Jack" Rose and "Bridgie" Webber a few hours after the murder.

Efforts of representatives of District Attorney Whitman to trace Becker's bank deposits resulted today in locating five more banks in which accounts were recorded in the name of Becker and his wife, representing altogether deposits of more than $25,000. All the deposits were made, it was learned, within the last eight months. In one bank Becker was credited with $13,000. It also was learned by the investigators that two police inspectors had made recent deposits totaling altogether $75,000. Evidence of graft taking against one of these inspectors is in the hands of the district attorney, who will seek his indictment when the graft feature of the case is taken up by the grand jury.

Collected $15,000 a Month.

Information charging that Becker turned over to "those higher up" more of his alleged graft collections than he kept himself was obtained by Assistant District Attorney Smith today. Becker's receipts, according to this evidence, amounted to about $15,000 a month, but of this $10,000 went to the so-called "system."

"Jack" Rose, it was learned today, has received absolute immunity. It became known that when Rose confessed before the grand jury a stipulation granting him his freedom as soon as he had completed his testimony at the trial of the case was signed by the district attorney and Judge Mulqueen with the approval of the grand jury. Rose is now in a penitent mood, according to his lawyer, and is anxious to reform. He plans, as soon as he is released, to leave the country with his wife and their two children and begin live over.

TO REARREST CONVICT ON HIS RELEASE TODAY

CANON CITY, Aug. 10.—When James J. Shane, convicted of forgery in Teller county, is released from the penitentiary here tomorrow, he will immediately be arrested on a warrant from Mansfield, O. Chief of Police James Feeney is here from Mansfield, and will take Shane back to Ohio to face charges of forgery in that state, alleged to have been perpetrated three years ago. Shane's home is in Chicago. He is said to have a forgery record in half the states of the Union.

EXPRESS MANAGER HURT BY INFERNAL MACHINE

GREENSBORO, N. C., Aug. 10.—William Bushee, manager of the High Point office of the Southern Express company, was perhaps fatally injured and his cashier, L. C. Morton, badly hurt today when a package which they were handling exploded with terrific force. The package, which was about to be consigned to the junk heap, proved to be an infernal machine of rather crude construction.

The package was addressed to Charles Hower, High Point, N. C., and was shipped from Thomasville, 50 miles distant. No one by that name could be found in High Point.

LIGHTNING KILLS THREE HORSES; STUNS DRIVER

Special to The Gazette.

CRIPPLE CREEK, Aug. 10.—A. Watson, 25 years old, was struck by lightning today while leading three horses from the Mill Gulch copper mine near Guffey, 38 miles west of here, to that town. The three animals were killed but Watson was only stunned, regaining consciousness after three hours. Persons who found Watson reported finding the carcasses of six cattle under one tree. All had been struck by lightning.

The Mill Gulch mine is owned by Colorado Springs people.

BATTLESHIP PROBABLY NOT BADLY DAMAGED

BOSTON, Aug. 10.—While no official information had been received it was said at the Charlestown navy yard tonight the battleship Nebraska, which struck an uncharted shoal off Point Judith yesterday, was headed for Rockport. This inference was drawn from private messages picked up by the wireless operator at Charlestown. The vessel is thought not to be badly injured or she would have been ordered to Charlestown for repairs.

STUDYING COLORADO PRISON METHODS

CANON CITY, Aug. 10.—J. E. Murray, engineer and penal expert from Nebraska, is here investigating the manner of handling convicts in Colorado with a view, it is said, of abolishing the factory system now in vogue in Nebraska, and substituting convict road work, which has proved so successful in Colorado.

TO REVISE METHODS APPRAISING IMPORTS

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10.—Plans for a sweeping investigation of the methods of appraising importations into the United States, which is expected to increase the revenues of the government by millions of dollars annually, were completed today by Secretary of the Treasury MacVeagh when a committee was appointed to make the inquiry.

Revelations of the sugar and other frauds convinced Secretary MacVeagh there is something radically wrong with the appraising system. He believes an incalculable sum is being lost every year by careless and antiquated methods.

GOVERNMENT EMPLOYE QUITS TO SUPPORT T. R.

JOPLIN, Mo., Aug. 10.—Will A. Ewing, a special assistant to Attorney General Wickersham in charge of government land suits in the southwest, resigned today to be free to support Theodore Roosevelt for president.

THE SERVANT TAX

From the London Chronicle.

Now that the talk is of taxing the servant one is reminded of early days in the game. In 1777 Pitt caught up the idea from Holland and placed a tax of a guinea a head on the male servant. The ... [illegible] ... instituted, ranging from 25 shillings where one servant was kept to £2 for each servant in households where 11 servants and more were kept. Bachelors paid at the rate of 50 shillings for each servant up to two, and £1 5s for each where 11 or more were retained. In 1812, when nearly 296,000 servants were taxed, prices went up. Then the master of one servant paid 48 shillings, and of two servants 62 shillings each. A sum of £7 13s, however, settled all claims for any one servant in any household. Here, too, the bachelor paid nearly double. In 1822 the duties were reduced by one-half, and many exemptions were allowed. In 1845 the tax was raised by ... and in 1853 Gladstone abolished the progressive scale and the bachelor impositions, and fixed the charge at a guinea for servants aged 18 years and at half a guinea for youths. In 1869 a license duty of 15 shillings, irrespective of the age of the retainer, was fixed, and this was the order until 1885.

Why do persons who are lost in a fog tend to move in a circle? A writer in Prometheus says that it is because of the fact that the right foot in almost all individuals turns out more than the left, and so makes the walker unconsciously deviate from a straight line. Quadrupeds, not being thus asymmetric, according to this theorist, find their way about with less difficulty.

ANOTHER ARREST IN ROSENTHAL MURDER

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., Aug. 10.—Sam Schepps, wanted in New York in connection with the murder of Herman Rosenthal, is under arrest in this city tonight. He is guarded by an officer, who, it is reported, is holding him pending the arrival of advices from the district attorney's office in New York.

Schepps is reported to have made the statement that he would go back to New York without a requisition. The arrest was made through a detective agency.

Venice is to be connected to the Island of Lido by a subway electric road, a distance of two miles.

U. S. Believes Orozco Still Seeks Peace

JUAREZ, Mexico, Aug. 10.—On reading a dispatch from Mexico City that he had made overtures for peace if allowed to escape from Mexico unprosecuted, Gen. Pascual Orozco, commander in chief of rebel forces, today made that denial of the whole story. Still maintaining that he had made no peace proposals to Rafael Hernandez, minister of fomento of Madero's cabinet, who left El Paso yesterday, Orozco declared the whole report was a ruse on the part of the federal government to create the impression that he was weak.

"I am tired of repeating that the rebels will stop fighting only upon the resignation of President Madero and of his cabinet," said the rebel commander. "It is false that I ever have admitted a lack of power in commanding any of the rebel leaders. It is untrue that I have ever made any peace proposal other than on the abolition of the Madero government. The fighting will continue."

Believe Orozco Is Weakening

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10.—Despite Orozco's protestations that the Mexican revolution is not over, the state department's advices today led officials here to believe the rebel leader is suing for peace, and that his offer is still open to the Madero government.

Senor Didapp, representative here of the revolutionary party, has again asked Senor Calderon, the Mexican ambassador, for an audience to discuss peace terms. Calderon recently refused a similar request.

What action this government would take if Orozco were to come to the United States has not been decided. Any agreement he might make with President Madero would not bind the department of justice in any action it might take to prosecute him for alleged violation of the neutrality laws.

Governor Colquitt's appeals to the federal government to get after the raiders who have crossed the line into Texas has been delayed because the governor addressed all his communications to Secretary Stinson. The avenue of communication between the governor of a state and the government is the secretary of state. His messages have been referred to Mr. Knox. Meanwhile, however, Colonel Steever has dispatched troops to dispel the rebel bands of marauders.

Huerta May Be Peace Envoy.

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 10.—Gen. Victoria Huerta, commander-in-chief of the federal troops, it is reported, is not unlikely to go to Juarez to assist in the peace negotiations. It is even asserted that a military train is in readiness to proceed south from Juarez to convey him to that city under a flag of truce. At the same time, however, dispatches from Torreon say refugees are pouring in there with reports that the rebels under Gen. Benjamin Argumedo and Gen. De La Torre are approaching that town with the intention of attacking the lines of communication and harrassing the federal troops.

Bold Bill Fields said to coy young Mariar,
One moonlight evening as he sat nigh her:
"Marry me, and mornings I'll build the fire."
Said she: "It's generous for you to so arrange,
But that's no inducement for me to change
For the stove I have is a modern gas range."

WOMEN MEMBERS APPEAL TO SISTERS

CHICAGO, Aug. 10.—Three of the four women members of the Progressive national committee today decided to issue an appeal for support of the new party to suffragists in the five states where women have the right to vote. These states are Colorado, Wyoming, Washington, California and Utah. The appeal also will be addressed to the women of five states where a vote will be taken this fall on constitutional amendments granting women the right of suffrage. These states are Ohio, Kansas, Michigan, Nevada and Wisconsin.

MILLER PLEADS GUILTY AND GOES TO PRISON

DENVER, Aug. 10.—Eugene Miller, who fired four shots into the head of his sweetheart, Miss Georgia Lichtenwalter, because she refused to elope with him, today pleaded guilty to a charge of assault to kill in the West Side court and was sentenced to from seven to 14 years in the state penitentiary. Miss Lichtenwalter was in the court room when sentence was pronounced.

Henry Robitelli, who shot and killed his wife, Pearl, Wednesday night, also pleaded guilty to a murder charge today. Sentence has not yet been pronounced upon him.

HUNDREDS OF MEXICANS, MOSTLY BOYS, SLAUGHTERED AS REVENGE ON REBELS

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 10.—Two hundred and ten residents of the little town of Puruandiro, Michoacan, at least half of whom were boys, were slaughtered at the behest of the jefe politico, in June, according to a story brought to Mexico City today by a commission which called upon the minister of the interior asking for guarantees. Members of the commission declared the jefe politico caused to be posted on the gate of the town cemetery a list of the dead which was added to from time to time.

The sacrifice was the price exacted by the jefe politico for the sacking of the town, which had occurred several weeks before by rebels. The jefe politico was powerless to resist the attack, and, in retaliation, ordered the slaughter, professing to believe that in killing the people he was punishing the rebels.

The butchery began in the jail, where the prisoners were killed by the guards. Then citizens were butchered. The people became so terror-stricken they refused to discuss it, and, for this reason, it was not called to the attention of the federal authorities until today.

The minister of the interior declared the slaughter the most atrocious in the history of the republic, and will be severely punished.

FITZGERRALD WITHDRAWS

DENVER, Aug. 10.—S. R. Fitzgerrald, lieutenant governor, who was nominated by the Democrats at Pueblo for governor, today in a letter to the state central committee, withdrew his name as a candidate.

The possibilities of cold storage exportation of food from Manchuria for European consumption are indicated by the market prices showing that eggs sell there for 50 cents a hundred, chickens and ducks for 5 cents each, deer for 75 cents and sheep for $2.

GOV. WILSON MAKES 3 CAMPAIGN TALKS TO AS MANY CLUBS

SEA GIRT, N. J., Aug. 10.—In the dusty road which fringes the lawn of the summer capitol here, Gov. Woodrow Wilson stood today shaking hands with hundreds of Democrats who surrounded him with brass bands. In all he made three campaign speeches. First came the Hungarian National Democratic club of New York city. The governor assured them he never had intended anything disrespectful in his writings on foreigners and that he had always felt a high regard for European people, because of his long study of their history. The delegation pledged its support.

The Brooklyn Democratic club came later. To them the governor said:

"I am complimented by your allegiance and I want to assure you that while I think that is a very high personal compliment, I take it myself simply that I, for the present at any rate, represent the earnest desires and purposes of the Democratic party. And yet it seems to me that we are standing in the presence of something higher than allegiance to the Democratic party. The country has been disappointed in the Republican party and it is turning to the Democratic party. That party is willing to show the way toward those things which must be realized. Some gentlemen seem to find it easy to make personalities out of politics, but it seems to me that when ever that is done politics is debased."

Glad Party Is United.

"Men who are in search of reform are now turning to the Democratic party, because, for my own part, I do not know where else they will turn to expect results. There is no discounting the strength and serviceability of a united party and the splendid part is the Democratic party is united. The party came out of the contest at the Baltimore convention without personal feeling of any kind. I am delighted to believe that whoever we may have supported for nomination we are now glad to work together."

To the Woodrow Wilson club of Orange, N. J., the governor made a longer speech in response to one by Judge Daniel A. Dugan. The governor remarked, first, that he was glad to be introduced by Judge Dugan, because it showed there were "good Irishmen among these Orangemen."

"You have tested my qualities, because you have known me at close range," he said, "and if you will be kind enough to vouch for me perhaps the rest of the country will be credulous of your report.

"New Jersey was known as the mother of trusts—a very troublesome and questionable family—and I had to spend my time outside of New Jersey assuring the people that it was not the fault or the disposition of the people of New Jersey that there were certain gentlemen who had undertaken to carry the Republican party in their pockets and to administer it independently of the rank and file of the Republicans of the state.

Jerseyites a Sample of Real People.

"And yet it would be hard nowadays to discriminate New Jersey from the rest of the United States, because everybody is sitting up and taking notice. New Jersey is progressive but the United States also is progressive and we have here merely a delightful sample of the people of the United States.

"Now those people are not bent upon destroying anything but they are bent upon setting everything in order, they are bent on justice, they are bent on seeing to it that the people in general are the partners of the government. And the Democratic party is now placed under a peculiar responsibility. The Democratic party has to prove that it is the worthy instrument of that zeal on the part of the people of the United States. If it doesn't prove it now it will never be given another chance to prove it. And, therefore, we are standing at a turning point in our politics, we must make good or go out of business. In the vernacular, it is a case of 'put up or shut up' because words are going to be discontinued and nothing will be honored except the actual carrying out of such a program as sensible men may unite in for the common benefit."

MONTENEGRIN ASKS FOR INTERVENTION

CETTINJE, Montenegro, Aug. 10.—The Montenegrin government today sent a circular to the representatives here of the great powers asking them to intervene in order to bring about a settlement of the frontier disputes with Turkey and to put an end to the conflicts.

PRESIDED AT PROGRESSIVE VICTORY.

Chester H. Aldrich of Nebraska, who presided as chairman at the recent Republican state convention, in Lincoln, when, with a clear majority of 200 delegates the supporters of the new Progressive party and Colonel Roosevelt regular party Taft supporters, refused to take the Roosevelt electors off the ticket and caused the president's supporters to bolt the convention and chose a new state committee empowered to choose a full state ticket to battle with Taft electors in the field.

CHANGES BRYAN'S ROUTE

Democratic Campaign Committee Decides Not to Let Him Follow On Roosevelt's Trail.

NEW YORK, Aug. 10.—William J. Bryan is not going to follow the trail of Colonel Roosevelt around the country during the coming presidential campaign, as has been planned it is now stated. This was practically decided at a meeting of the subcommittee on speakers of the Democratic national campaign committee this afternoon. Some time ago it was suggested that it would be a good idea to have Mr. Bryan follow the colonel in the latter's campaign trips and answer his speeches. Today it was decided to map out an entirely different itinerary for Mr. Bryan.

There was a meeting tonight of the organization committee of which Senator Gore is chairman. It had been planned to place Joseph E. Davies, secretary of the national committee, in charge of the Chicago headquarters. Now the plan is to have Mr. Davies divide his time between New York and Chicago. Charles Boeschenstein, national committeeman for Illinois, will be the active manager of the Chicago branch.

ATTENTION TURNS TO INDIANAPOLIS TRIALS

Ortie McManigal Will Be Taken to That City to Testify in Cases Against Labor Leaders.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 10.—As the trial of Clarence S. Darrow for alleged jury bribing draws to a close, the attention of union labor leaders on the Pacific coast is being directed to the coming trials at Indianapolis. Fifty-four leaders of others affiliated in less degree with organized labor are to be placed upon trial in the federal court there on October 1 for alleged violation of the law relative to the interstate transportation of dynamite, and California is expected to provide a number of important witnesses.

Ortie McManigal, whose confession brought about the arrest of the McNamara brothers, and indirectly, that of the other union men acused in the so-called dynamite conspiracy, will be taken to Indianapolis to testify for the government.

Malcolm McLaren, the Burns detective, who has had charge of McManigal since his arrest, also will be an important witness for the government.

McManigal's long incarceration in the county jail here is said to have told upon him severely, although those who have access to him asserted that his health was good. It was generally believed that he would gain his liberty after the conclusion of the federal trials at Indianapolis and Los Angeles, but officials interested in the case believed that at least a year would be required until all of the cases were disposed of. Until that time McManigal will remain a prisoner of Los Angeles county.

MOFFAT MAN KILLS SELF

MOFFAT, Colo., Aug. 10.—George Sherman, a prominent business man, committed suicide last night by cutting his throat with a pocket knife. Despondency caused by ill health is given as the cause. Mrs. Sherman, who had been visiting relatives in Pueblo, was returning home at the time.

HOUSE, EAGER TO ADJOURN, PASSES SCORE OF BILLS

Two of Measures Intended to Better Safeguard Lives of Passengers On Ocean-going Vessels.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10.—The house today, eager for adjournment, passed 35 private claim bills, adopted a half score of resolutions, sent the Panama canal bill to conference, and passed three measures of general importance.

Two of the measures passed grew out of the agitation for greater safeguards for human life at sea, following the Titanic disaster. One was introduced by Chairman Alexander of the merchant marine committee, providing that each passenger-carrying vessel must hereafter be equipped with enough life belts for every passenger and member of the crew, and with lifeboats sufficient to remove from a stricken ship all human beings at one time. It also extends the inspection of ocean-going steamers to those flying foreign flags, but which touch at United States ports. The other measure was introduced by Hard of Texas, Democrat, and made more inflexible the clearance for vessels not manned according to law.

CATHOLIC CONVENTION DATES ARE ANNOUNCED

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Aug. 10.—Anthony Matre, national secretary of the American Federation of Catholic societies, today announced that the eleventh national convention of this organization will be opened at Louisville, Ky., August 18, and continue until August 21. More than 3,000,000 Catholics in the United States will be represented by delegates.

Somebody has figured that an average man of 150 pounds contains the constituents found in 1,200 eggs. There is enough gas in him to fill a gasometer of 3,649 cubic feet. He contains enough iron to make four tenpenny nails. His fat would make 75 candles and a good-sized cake of soap. His phosphate content would make 8,064 boxes of matches. There is enough hydrogen in him in combination to fill a balloon.

POSTAL AFFAIRS ARE CONSIDERED IN SENATE

No Action on Plan to Increase Pay of Mail Carriers and Good Road Appropriations, However.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10.—Increased pay for rural mail carriers and federal appropriations for good roads, held the interest of the senate today in debate on the postoffice appropriation bill. Attempts to bring both subjects to a vote were defeated by the inability of senate leaders to keep a quorum in the chamber.

The plan for federal aid to public road building in the states will be taken up Monday and a vote had on several important amendments that are pending. This will be followed by a vote on Senator Johnstone's amendment to increase pay of rural carriers from $1,000 to $1,200 a year.

During the debate on the bill today legislation to prohibit postal employes from joining "outside labor organizations" was urged by Senator Nelson and others.

Senator Cummins joined in saying that it would be "intolerable" to allow postal or other government employes to be subject to strike orders.

WEARY SOLDIERS RUSH TO DEFENSE OF FRISCO

In Theory "Invaders" Have Been Foiled In Attempt to Enter Bay, But Landed Force On Coast to South.

COYOTE, Cal., Aug. 10.—Two battalions of United States regular infantry dragged weary feet through the town of Salinas today, and swinging around the foothills of the Santa Cruz mountains, headed for San Francisco. They were retreating from the presidio at Monterey, in the presence of a "red" or invading army of 4,000 men which landed there today with intent to capture the city, fortifications and presidio of San Francisco, 125 miles to the north.

Immediately upon receiving word of the landing of the reds under General Robert Wankowski, of the national guard of California, Brigadier General Schuyler at San Francisco prepared to throw his forces, about equal in number to those of the "reds" into the field, and to stop the enemy as far south of the city as possible. It will be his effort to protect, also, the city of San Jose.

In the theory of this, the biggest "war game" ever played on the Pacific coast, an attempt to enter San Francisco bay has been foiled, but the defending fleet being the weaker, has been bottled up by the enemy inside the Golden Gate and the enemy's transports have landed in Monterey, the first port on the Pacific coast over which the American flag ever floated.

WANTS TO INVESTIGATE RECLAMATION PROJECTS

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10.—A special committee to investigate government reclaim projects was proposed today by Senator Borah.

"This is not an investigation based on any charge of malfeasance or misconduct of officers of the reclamation service," he said. "It is designed only to determine whether too many charges have been placed against the irrigation lands in apportioning the amount settlers must pay."

PRESIDENT TAFT HAS VETOED 25 MEASURES

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10.—When President Taft yesterday vetoed the wool bill, he had stamped with his disapproval the twenty-fifth legislative measure sent to him from congress. Most of the vetoes were on comparatively unimportant subjects during the special session last summer.

Four of his vetoes have been of tariff bills. His one other veto of importance last year was directed at the joint resolution admitting Arizona and New Mexico to statehood. This bill met with executive disapproval because of the provision in the Arizona constitution allowing the recall of judges.

In its successful expedition to the South pole, the Fram, under Captain Amundsen, was fitted throughout with oil-burning engines, thus displacing the bulky coal fuel and giving much greater radius of action.

PEACE OFFICER DIES

Deputy Sheriff Lloyd D. Compton, aged 40, died from pneumonia at his home, 714 East Uintah street, yesterday morning at 5:30 o'clock. He is survived by his widow and a 4-year-old son of this city and his parents and a brother, of Columbia, Ind. Funeral services have not been arranged pending word from relatives in the east.

It was while discharging his duty as under sheriff that Compton became ill. Late last January he responded to a call from the Nordrach sanatorium at Austins Bluffs, which had been robbed by a man named Frank Stevens. He caught a bad cold during the night search for the man, and later took pneumonia. He was confined to his home for several months, and it was only recently that he was able to return to the office.

When word was received here that George Ballew, who shot several people at the South Platte summer hotel, was in this vicinity, Compton joined the posse in the search of the foothills for him. He returned to his home that evening, ill, and since then had not been down town.

He came here from Indiana, working first as a street railway motorman. Later he became a patrolman, and after being promoted to the sergeant's desk and to city detective, he was appointed deputy sheriff by Sheriff Birdsall.

FINISH BLOCK THIS WEEK

The experimental block of paving which is being laid by the city on Nevada avenue, between Pikes Peak and Hugeriano, will be probably completed by the end of this week. The paving is similar to that laid by the Hill company on the other business streets, except that the base is macadam instead of concrete. This paving, it is thought, will wear as well with light traffic as the other will with heavy traffic.

3,500 Attend Big Missouri Picnic in the Mansions Park

The second annual Missouri picnic, in which both the temporary and permanent Missouri clubs of Colorado participated, was held yesterday in Mansions park, Manitou. It is estimated that at least 3,500 people attended, the gathering being larger than any other Manitou picnic with the exception of All-States day last August.

The program, which consisted of songs, instrumental music and addresses, began at 10:30 o'clock in the morning, and continued until 5 o'clock in the afternoon. At noon a basket luncheon was served in Cottonwood grove, a part of Mansions park. Free coffee was served by the Cave of the Winds management.

The morning program opened with a prayer by the Rev. Robert P. Carson, pastor of the First Congregational church of Manitou. This was followed by the singing of "Star-Spangled Banner" by a chorus of young men and women from Missouri. The chorus had been practicing for some time, and all of the selections were especially good.

The address of welcome was delivered by Mayor William Lennon of Manitou, who said the town was extremely glad to welcome such a large crowd of Missourians and that he hopes they will make themselves at home and enjoy every minute of their stay in the Pikes Peak region. After the singing of "Missouri" by the chorus, W. B. Kirby, president of the Manitou Springs Hot Iron club, made a brief address, telling the "Show Me" representatives about the various attractions of the town and inviting them to visit all of them.

Lunch Ends Morning Session.

After several more selections by the chorus, an address by the Rev. Mr. Russell of St. Louis and a recitation by Miss Ruth Wenzlich, also of St. Louis, the morning session was brought to a close, and the large crowd commenced to make preparations for lunch.

The afternoon session opened at 1:30 o'clock with a selection by the Temple quartet, composed of Vernon Clark, Daniel Nelson, Walter Bybee and J. F. Schletter. This was followed by an address by Mayor Avery of Colorado Springs, a former Missourian, who has not forgotten the good features of Mizzo.

Dr. Samuel Garvin, pastor of the First Presbyterian church of this city, made a brief address, and Gov. John F. Shafroth made the address of the day. He spoke on the resources of Colorado. The entire afternoon program was interspersed with selections by the chorus. At 3 o'clock the Midland band gave one of its regular concerts in the park.

The morning exercises were in charge of E. M. Birkes of St. Joseph, former president of the temporary Missouri club, and the afternoon exercises were in charge of Mayor Avery.

The annual Texas picnic will be held in Mansions park tomorrow, commencing at 10 o'clock in the morning. The Kansas club will hold its picnic Thursday. The Kentucky and Tennessee tourists will meet in the park Tuesday afternoon to form a Kentucky-Tennessee club and to make arrangements for a picnic. The Arkansans will organize next week. After all the state picnics have been held an All-States day, similar to the one last year, will be held.

MINISTERS' SERVICE TO FOLLOW BAND CONCERT

Immediately following the band concert at Stratton park this afternoon, a short sermon will be preached there under the auspices of the Ministerial association. The service held will be the first of a series planned by the ministers. The speaker for today will be the Rev. J. H. Spencer, pastor of the First Baptist church, and the sermon will be only 15 minutes long. The whole service will be limited to 30 minutes. It is the plan of the ministers to make these services as up to date as possible. The subject of the sermon today probably will be "Community Extention."

JOHNSON PROBABLY WILL BE RETURNED TO THE PEN

D. E. Johnson, the paroled convict arrested Friday on a charge of trying to defraud the First National bank, Colorado City, of $25, probably will be returned to the penitentiary at Canon City, according to the sheriff's office. In this event it is not likely, it is said, that he will be prosecuted on the new charge. Johnson has been bound over to the district court for trial, and is in jail in default of $1,000 bond.

Johnson, alias Briggs, alias Quiggle, also deposited two notes, one for $1,060 and the other for $465, in the Colorado City bank, according to the authorities, and has given no satisfactory explanation how the paper came into his possession. It is believed the notes were stolen in a mail bag robbery here several days ago. Postal inspectors have been notified of Johnson's arrest but thus far have not indicated that they would investigate him.

CHIEF BURNO WANTS JAIL SENTENCE FOR SPEEDERS

Chief of Police Burno is out for the auto and the motorcycle speeder, and declares it will be a fight to a finish before he is through with his campaign against what he terms the speed evil.

The chief and his auto cops are playing no favorites in the crusade—all speeders look alike to them. Yesterday W. K. Jewett, E. J. Forsythe, C. Goad, M. Carey and Philip Grayson were each fined $5 in police court upon conviction of traveling along the streets at a faster clip than the law allows. Charles Ferrin, who is charged with exceeding the speed limit Friday evening, also was cited into court, and his case continued.

"We are going to suppress the speeders—that is a certainty," said Burno yesterday. "We have tried to handle them by means of ordinary methods, and they have not been successful. When we bring a speeder into court and fine him a small amount, he smiles and pays up. That's all there is to it. Most of those arrested care little for the fine imposed. That is why we need a more drastic ordinance if we hope to get results."

Chief Burno proposes another ordinance covering this point, and if he has his way, and the chances are that he will, the new measure will provide a fine for the first offense and a jail sentence for the second. With an ordinance of that kind in effect, Burno believes the number of "second time" violators of the speed laws will be reduced to a minimum. Anyway, he is going to ask the city council to pass such a law within the next few days.

ILLUSTRATED TRAVELOGUE AT CHAMBER COMMERCE

The Chamber of Commerce will try an innovation this week in connection with that part of its work dealing with information to visitors.

An illustrated travelogue will be given Tuesday evening at its rooms on the fourth floor of the Burns Theater building. Carl Balcomb, the well-known lecturer on Colorado subjects, will deliver his travelogue, relating to the Pikes Peak region and to Colorado. It will be handsomely illustrated with a large selection of views, particularly of the Pikes Peak region.

Mr. Balcomb's lectures at the Stratton park pavilion this summer have proved extremely popular, and have been one of the most interesting ways of informing strangers of the beauties of the Pikes Peak region. This spring he made a tour through Texas, during which he presented his Colorado views to many representative gatherings.

The travelogue will be open to the general public, without charge, and visitors especially are invited to attend. The lecture will begin at 7:45 o'clock.

Various commercial organizations, and particularly those of southern California, have used the picture lecture as a means of interesting and informing visitors, and now that the Chamber of Commerce is housed in its commodious headquarters on the top floor of the Burns building, it is in a position to carry out plans for publicity of this character.

COL. E. C. BARKER DIES

Col. E. C. Barker of Manitou died Friday night at St. Francis hospital. He had been a resident of Manitou for more than 28 years, and a member of Manitou Masonic lodge No. 68 for about 20 years. He was justice of the peace in Manitou for 12 or 15 years.

Col. Barker was 88 years old, having been born in Hardwick, Vt., in 1824. His parents moved to Boston when he was a boy, and he grew up in that city. At the outbreak of the Civil war he entered the army and was a captain in the Third United States infantry. At the close of the war he was acting commander of that regiment. He was a member of the G. A. R.

He came to Colorado in 1882 and had lived in this state almost continuously since. A few years ago it was found necessary for the sake of his health to send him to the Soldiers home at Leavenworth, Kan. He had been at St. Francis hospital for the last two years.

Short services will be held at 3 o'clock this afternoon at the First Congregational church, Manitou, of which he was a member. Interment will be in Crystal Vale cemetery, that town in charge of the Masons.

For Sallow, Blotchy, Rough or Greasy Skins

(From Woman's Tribune.)

Some skins require constant grooming to keep them from becoming oily, muddy, blotchy or rough, or if such condition has developed, to overcome it. In such chronic cases it is particularly inadvisable to keep piling on cosmetics which clog the pores, collect dust and dirt—especially in warm weather—making the complexion worse than ever. It's a lot more sensible to use ordinary mercolized wax, which literally absorbs a bad complexion. Apply the wax, like cold cream, before retiring; next morning, in washing it off, you'll wash away fine, flour-like particles of the unsightly cuticle. Repeat for a week or more and you'll have an entirely new skin—soft, satiny, spotless and beautiful as a child's. One ounce of mercolized wax, procurable at any druggist's, is all you'll need.

If the skin be wrinkled or flabby, here's the best possible remedy. Mix a pint each of hazel and 1 ounce powdered saxolite and use as a face bath. It works like a miracle, yet is entirely harmless.

LOVESICK GIRL SUICIDES

SEDALIA, Mo., Aug. 10.—Miss Bessie Altus, a 17-year-old college student from Cahool, Mo., who committed suicide by hurling herself in front of a train, was buried two miles south of Sedalia.

Among her effects was found a letter addressed to Delos Niblack, her 19-year-old sweetheart, whose mother refused permission for him to marry on account of his age. The letter was written two days before the girl killed herself.

In one sentence Miss Altus says she will always love him, no matter whom he might marry, but she hopes he will never wed.

"I am sending my soul to hell for the love I bear you," is another sentence.

"We never get what we want," she continued, "for I wanted you, but I got hell instead. I have not had a moment's rest since we parted."

WEARY SOLDIERS RUSH TO DEFENSE OF FRISCO

In Theory "Invaders" Have Been Foiled In Attempt to Enter Bay, But Landed Force On Coast to South.

COYOTE Cal Aug. 10—Two battalions of United States regular infantry dragged weary feet through the town of Salinas today and swinging around the foothills of the Santa Cruz mountains, headed for San Francisco They were retreating from the presidio at Monterey, in the presence of a 'red' or invading army of 4,000 men which landed there today with intent to capture the city, fortifications and presidio of San Francisco, 125 miles to the north

Immediately upon receiving word of the landing of the reds under General Robert Wankowski, of the national guard of California Brigadier General Schuyler at San Francisco prepared to throw his forces, about equal in number to those of the 'reds' into the field and to stop the enemy as far south of the city as possible It will be his effort to protect also the city of San Jose

In the theory of this the biggest 'war game' ever played on the Pacific coast, an attempt to enter San Francisco bay has been foiled, but the 'defending' fleet being the weaker has been bottled up by the enemy inside the Golden Gate and the enemy's transports have landed in Monterey, the first port on the Pacific coast over which the American flag ever floated

PRESIDENT TAFT HAS VETOED 25 MEASURES

WASHINGTON Aug 10—When President Taft yesterday vetoed the wool bill, he had stamped with his disapproval the twenty-fifth legislative measure sent to him from congress. Most of the vetoes were on comparatively unimportant subjects during the special session last summer

Four of his vetoes have been of tariff bills His one other veto of importance last year was directed at the joint resolution admitting Arizona and New Mexico to statehood This bill met with executive disapproval because of the provision in the Arizona constitution allowing the recall of judges

PEACE OFFICER DIES

Deputy Sheriff Lloyd D. Compton, aged 40, died from pneumonia at his home, 714 East Uintah street, yesterday morning at 5:30 o'clock. He is survived by his widow and a 4-year-old son of this city and his parents and a brother, of Columbia, Ind. Funeral services have not been arranged pending word from relatives in the east.

It was while discharging his duty as under sheriff that Compton became ill. Late last January he responded to a call from the Nordrach sanatorium at Austins Bluffs, which had been robbed by a man named Frank Stevens. He caught a bad cold during the night search for the man, and later took pneumonia. He was confined to his home for several months, and it was only recently that he was able to return to the office.

When word was received here that George Ballow, who shot several people at the South Platte summer hotel, was in this vicinity, Compton joined the posse in the search of the foothills for him. He returned to his home that evening ill, and since then had not been down town.

He came here from Indiana, working first as a street railway motorman. Later he became a patrolman, and after being promoted to the sergeant's desk and to city detective, he was appointed deputy sheriff by Sheriff Birdsall.

FINISH BLOCK THIS WEEK

The experimental block of paving which is being laid by the city on Nevada avenue, between Pikes Peak and Huerfano, will be probably completed by the end of this week. The paving is similar to that laid by the Hill company on the other business streets, except that the base is macadam instead of concrete. This paving, it is thought, will wear as well with light traffic as the other will with heavy traffic.

EVERYTHING MUST GO

Mr. Lynn S. Atkinson has for the last 25 years been one of the leading contractors and builders of Colorado Springs. During that time he has accumulated various pieces of business, warehouse, and residence property. These properties have paid him good returns on the investment. Mr. Atkinson has been in the city for the past two weeks making an effort to dispose of his property, and has sold several pieces. He has finally decided to hold an Auction sale, on Thursday, August 15, 1912, and on that day dispose of everything he owns in Colorado Springs, not excepting his beautiful home residence together with the furniture and furnishings. All must go to the highest bidder regardless of what it brings, at public auction.

3,500 Attend Big Missouri Picnic in the Mansions Park

The second annual Missouri picnic, in which both the temporary and permanent Missouri clubs of Colorado participated, was held yesterday in Mansions park, Manitou. It is estimated that at least 3,500 people attended, the gathering being larger than any other Manitou picnic with the exception of All-States day last August.

The program, which consisted of songs, instrumental music and addresses, began at 10:30 o'clock in the morning, and continued until 5 o'clock in the afternoon. At noon a basket luncheon was served in Cottonwood grove, a part of Mansions park. Free coffee was served by the Cave of the Winds management.

The morning program opened with a prayer by the Rev. Robert P. Carson, pastor of the First Congregational church of Manitou. This was followed by the singing of "Star-Spangled Banner" by a chorus of young men and women from Missouri. The chorus had been practicing for some time, and all of the selections were especially good.

The address of welcome was delivered by Mayor William Lennon of Manitou, who said the town was extremely glad to welcome such a large crowd of Missourians and that he hopes they will make themselves at home and enjoy every minute of their stay in the Pikes Peak region. After the singing of "Missouri" by the chorus, W. B. Kirby, president of the Manitou Springs Hot Iron club, made a brief address, telling the "Show Me" representatives about the various attractions of the town and inviting them to visit all of them.

Lunch Ends Morning Session.

After several more selections by the chorus, an address by the Rev. Mr. Russell of St. Louis and a recitation by Miss Ruth Wenzlich, also of St. Louis, the morning session was brought to a close, and the large crowd commenced to make preparations for lunch.

The afternoon session opened at 1:30 o'clock with a selection by the Temple quartet, composed of Vernon Clark, Daniel Nelson, Walter Bybee and J. F. Schlotter. This was followed by an address by Mayor Avery of Colorado Springs, a former Missourian, who has not forgotten the good features of Mizzo.

Dr. Samuel Garvin, pastor of the First Presbyterian church of this city, made a brief address, and Gov. John F. Shafroth made the address of the day. He spoke on the resources of Colorado. The entire afternoon program was interspersed with selections by the chorus. At 3 o'clock the Midland band gave one of its regular concerts in the park.

The morning exercises were in charge of E. M. Birkes of St. Joseph, former president of the temporary Missouri club, and the afternoon exercises were in charge of Mayor Avery.

The annual Texas picnic will be held in Mansions park tomorrow, commencing at 10 o'clock in the morning. The Kansas club will hold its picnic Thursday. The Kentucky and Tennessee tourists will meet in the park Tuesday afternoon to form a Kentucky-Tenessee club and to make arrangements for a picnic. The Arkansans will organize next week. After all the state picnics have been held an All-States day, similar to the one last year, will be held.

MINISTERS' SERVICE TO FOLLOW BAND CONCERT

Immediately following the band concert at Stratton park this afternoon, a short sermon will be preached there under the auspices of the Ministerial association. The service held will be the first of a series planned by the ministers. The speaker for today will be the Rev. J. H. Spencer, pastor of the First Baptist church, and the sermon will be only 15 minutes long. The whole service will be limited to 30 minutes. It is the plan of the ministers to make these services as up to date as possible. The subject of the sermon today probably will be "Community Extention."

JOHNSON PROBABLY WILL BE RETURNED TO THE PEN

D. E. Johnson, the paroled convict arrested Friday on a charge of trying to defraud the First National bank, Colorado City, of $25, probably will be returned to the penitentiary at Canon City, according to the sheriff's office. In this event it is not likely, it is said, that he will be prosecuted on the new charge. Johnson has been bound over to the district court for trial, and is in jail in default of $1,000 bond.

Johnson, alias Briggs, alias Quiggle, also deposited two notes, one for $1,000, and the other for $465, in the Colorado City bank, according to the authorities, and has given no satisfactory explanation how the paper came into his possession. It is believed the notes were stolen in a mail bag robbery here several days ago. Postal inspectors have been notified of Johnson's arrest, but thus far have not indicated that they would investigate him.

CHIEF BURNO WANTS JAIL SENTENCE FOR SPEEDERS

Chief of Police Burno is out for the auto and the motorcycle speeder, and declares it will be a fight to a finish before he is through with his campaign against what he terms the speed evil.

The chief and his auto cops are playing no favorites in the crusade—all speeders look alike to them. Yesterday W. K. Jewett, E. J. Forsythe, C. Goad, M. Carey and Philip Grayson were each fined $5 in police court upon conviction of traveling along the streets at a faster clip than the law allows. Charles Ferrin, who is charged with exceeding the speed limit Friday evening, also was cited into court, and his case continued.

"We are going to suppress the speeders—that is a certainty," said Burno yesterday. "We have tried to handle them by means of ordinary methods, and they have not been successful. When we bring a speeder into court and fine him a small amount, he smiles and pays up. That's all there is to it. Most of those arrested care little for the fine imposed. That is why we need a more drastic ordinance if we hope to get results."

Chief Burno proposes another ordinance covering this point, and if he has his way, and the chances are that he will, the new measure will provide a fine for the first offense and a jail sentence for the second. With an ordinance of that kind in effect, Burno believes the number of "second time" violators of the speed laws will be reduced to a minimum. Anyway, he is going to ask the city council to pass such a law within the next few days.

ILLUSTRATED TRAVELOGUE AT CHAMBER COMMERCE

The Chamber of Commerce will try an innovation this week in connection with that part of its work dealing with information to visitors.

An illustrated travelogue will be given Tuesday evening at its rooms on the fourth floor of the Burns Theater building. Carl Balcomb, the well-known lecturer on Colorado subjects, will deliver his travelogue relating to the Pikes Peak region and to Colorado. It will be handsomely illustrated with a large selection of views, particularly of the Pikes Peak region.

Mr. Balcomb's lectures at the Stratton park pavilion this summer have proved extremely popular, and have been one of the most interesting ways of informing strangers of the beauties of the Pikes Peak region. This spring he made a tour through Texas, during which he presented his Colorado views to many representative gatherings.

The travelogue will be open to the general public, without charge, and visitors especially are invited to attend. The lecture will begin at 7:45 o'clock.

Various commercial organizations, and particularly those of southern California, have used the picture lecture as a means of interesting and informing visitors, and now that the Chamber of Commerce is housed in its commodious headquarters on the top floor of the Burns building, it is in a position to carry out plans for publicity of this character.

COL. E. C. BARKER DIES

Col. E. C. Barker of Manitou died Friday night at St. Francis hospital. He had been a resident of Manitou for more than 28 years, and a member of Manitou Masonic lodge No. 68 for about 20 years. He was justice of the peace in Manitou for 12 or 15 years.

Col. Barker was 88 years old, having been born in Hardwick, Vt., in 1824. His parents moved to Boston when he was a boy, and he grew up in that city. At the outbreak of the Civil war he entered the army and was a captain in the Third United States infantry. At the close of the war he was acting commander of that regiment. He was a member of the G. A. R.

He came to Colorado in 1882 and had lived in this state almost continuously since. A few years ago it was found necessary for the sake of his health to send him to the Soldiers' home at Leavenworth, Kan. He had been at St. Francis hospital for the last two years.

Short services will be held at 2 o'clock this afternoon at the First Congregational church, Manitou, of which he was a member. Interment will be in Crystal Valley cemetery, that town in charge of the Masons.

For Sallow, Blotchy, Rough or Greasy Skins

(From Woman's Tribune.)

Some skins require constant grooming to keep them from becoming oily, muddy, blotchy or rough, or if such condition has developed, to overcome it. In such chronic cases it is particularly inadvisable to keep piling on cosmetics which clog the pores, collect dust and dirt—especially in warm weather—making the complexion worse than ever. It's a lot more sensible to use ordinary mercolized wax, which literally absorbs a bad complexion. Apply the wax like cold cream, before retiring; next morning, in washing it off, you'll wash away fine, flour-like particles of the unsightly cuticle. Repeat for a week or more and you'll have an entirely new skin—soft, satiny, spotless and beautiful as a child's. One ounce of mercolized wax, procurable at any druggist's, is all you'll need.

If the skin be wrinkled or flabby, here's the best possible remedy. Mix a pint of fresh buttermilk and 1 ounce powdered saxolite and use as a face bath. It works like a miracle, yet is entirely harmless.

LOVESICK GIRL SUICIDES

SEDALIA, Mo., Aug. 10.—Miss Bessie Altus, a 17-year-old college student from Cabool, Mo., who committed suicide by hurling herself in front of a train, was buried two miles south of Sedalia.

Among her effects was found a letter addressed to Delos Niblack, her 19-year-old sweetheart, whose mother refused permission for him to marry on account of his age. The letter was written two days before the girl killed herself.

In one sentence Miss Altus says she will always love him, no matter whom he might marry, but she hopes he will never wed.

"I am sending my soul to hell for the love I bear you," is another sentence.

"We never get what we want," she continued, "for I wanted you, but I got hell instead. I have not had a moment's rest since we parted."

P. P. REGION PROMINENTLY EXPLOITED IN BULLETIN OF MISSOURI PACIFIC RY.

Colorado Springs and the Pikes Peak region are given much prominence in the July issue of the Agents' Bulletin, published at St. Louis by the Missouri Pacific.

J. W. Booth, advertising agent for the road, and one of the railroad men who were entertained here last fall by the advertising committee of the Chamber of Commerce, has an article covering a page and a quarter, describing the Cog road trip to Pikes Peak. It is entitled, "A Railroad Ride Above the Clouds," and is illustrated with six handsome photographs taken on the trip. A strong boost article on the Shan Kive carnival also is displayed, and mention is made of the Knights of Columbus council, which was held last week in this city. In a two-column box is printed a letter from Secretary A. W. Henderson of the Chamber of Commerce, addressed to Passenger Traffic Manager C. L. Stone of the railroad, thanking him for advertisements of the Pikes Peak region and Colorado.

In what corresponds to the editorial column of a newspaper or ordinary periodical, especial attention is called to the article on the Cog road and to Henderson's letter.

Deaths and Funerals

R. J. FLEMING DIES

Robert J. Fleming, a well-known funeral director of Colorado Springs, died at his home, 733 North Tejon street, at 8:20 o'clock Friday night. He is survived by his wife, a sister living in Versailles, Ia.; his mother and two brothers, W. F. Fleming of Washington, Ia., and G. W. Fleming of Newton, Ia.

Funeral services will be held from the Fleming & Patterson undertaking rooms, tomorrow morning at 8 o'clock, the Rev. J. S. Wilson, pastor of the United Presbyterian church, officiating. The body will be taken to Washington, Ia., for interment.

Mr. Fleming, who was 60 years old, had been in the undertaking business here for 14 years. He was well known in business and lodge circles.

George B. Lewis, a printer, formerly of Chicago, dropped dead at the corner of Tejon and Huerfano streets yesterday afternoon shortly before 5 o'clock. He came here last February because of poor health and since that time had lived at the Union Printers Home. No arrangements have been made for the funeral, pending advices from his relatives in Chicago. Lewis was 29 years old.

The funeral of Miss Amanda Hammond, sister of E. C. Hammond of this city, and who died Thursday in Millis, Mass., a suburb of Boston, was held in that city yesterday. Miss Hammond lived here for five years and was a member of the local Order of the Eastern Star. She removed to Millis four years ago.

Amusements

ORVILLE STAMM, THE STRONG BOY, AT SAVOY THEATER

The most perfectly developed boy on earth at the Savoy theater Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. Orville Stamm, 17 years old, is frankly a wonder. His muscular development is astounding, his posing artistic, and brings into play the marvelous muscles built upon the frame of his magnificently proportioned youth. He performs feats of strength past belief. While supporting a piano and man upon his chest, he himself sings a solo. Another feat is lifting a horse with his right hand; pretty sound proof that Sandow has a rival, isn't it?

The astounding feats of strength performed by this mere boy must be seen to be believed. The act is one of the biggest on the Orpheum circuit, and the only reason that Colorado Springs people will have the opportunity of witnessing it is owing to the fact that Mr. Stamm and his manager are spending a few weeks' vacation here and at Manitou, and has consented to go on for three days at the Savoy. In addition to this big vaudeville act, there will be shown four reels of the best pictures to be seen anywhere.

The Savoy has installed a new motion picture machine and as well a new daylight screen, making a most perfect picture.

GOLDSCHMIDT SUED FOR TOTAL PROMISSORY NOTES

Herman Goldsmidt, according to the complaint, Hermann von Goldschmidt, according to the city directory, the "baron," as he is known to the boulevard promenaders, late of a fashionable hotel here, later of a smart apartment house, and now of Boulder Crescent, is again on the books at the court house.

This time the baron is the defendant—on the other occasion, several weeks ago, he was a rather sensational witness for the defense in a justice court scandal, which subsequently evaporated.

According to the complaint filed in the district court yesterday, Harry Leven advanced the baron $350 on a promissory note September 5, 1911, and a week later gave him $520 on a note. Leven then sold the notes to the Giles Mercantile agency, and that organization now seeks to recover an alleged balance due on the notes, together with interest.

In many cases makes the ruptured parts so strong and sound that the rupture opening is entirely closed and no sign of the affliction left.
That is how the Cluthe Truss has cured some of the worst cases of rupture on record.
Among them, men and women 50 to 70 years old, who had been ruptured 20 to 50 years—cured many of them after every- thing else, including operation, had proved utterly useless.

Got World's Greatest Rupture Book

So that you can judge for yourself, we want to send a free book we have written, a cloth-bound book of advice. Even physicians who have read it say it is the best book ever written on rupture.
It sums up all we have learned in 40 years of day-after-day experience in the successful treatment of over 200,000 cases. It deals in simple language and photo- graphic illustrations with the dangers of operation; puts you on guard against throwing money away on things that can't stand a fair test.
And it tells all about the Cluthe Truss— how little it costs—how it ends constant expense—how it frees you forever from the torturing harness which makes other trusses so uncomfortable (no springs, belt or elastic around your waist, no leg straps)—how you can try a Cluthe Truss 60 days at OUR risk, thus giving you plenty of time to make sure of its wonderful hold- ing and healing powers.
Also in their own words it tells the experiences of many former sufferers— gives their names and addresses—perhaps you know some of them.

HOT WEATHER IS QUICK TO AFFECT THE BOWELS

Well-Known Fact That Extreme Heat Conduces to Chronic Constipation.

The disposition to eat cold food and indulge in iced drinks is one reason why constipation and diarrhoea is so prevalent in summer, and there is no time when people should more care- fully avoid bowel disturbances, as much serious disease is directly trace- able to these conditions. We need all of our strength to withstand the enervating effect of heat.
To regulate the bowels and quickly relieve even the most aggravated case of constipation, the combination of simple laxative herbs with pepsin known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, is highly recommended by all who have ever used it. Unlike cathartics and violent purgatives, Dr. Caldwell's Syr- up Pepsin acts gently on the stomach, liver and bowels, without griping or other discomfort, bringing relief in an easy, natural manner. It can be used with perfect safety by the most deli- cate woman or child, and yet is equally effective for the strongest constitution. Mild, pleasant to take, and inexpensive, it is the ideal family laxative. By cleansing the bowel tract thoroughly and eliminating the foreign matter and poisons that irritate and inflame, it will quickly check summer diarrhoea and restore normal conditions.
Druggists sell Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin for fifty cents a bottle, a larger, family size costs one dollar. Get a bottle and keep it in the house; it will save many times its cost in doc- tor bills. A free trial bottle, postpaid, can be obtained by writing to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 406 Washington St., Monti- cello, Illinois.

CONDEMN PRINTING OF POSTERS OUT OF TOWN

The Printing Pressmen and Assist- ants union of Colorado Springs have adopted resolutions condemning the Chamber of Commerce because the carnival posters were printed outside the city. The Chamber of Commerce had nothing to do with the printing of these posters, but F. C. Matthews, chairman of the carnival executive committee, said yesterday:
"We gave the work of printing these posters to out-of-town people for two reasons. In the first place, we wanted a rush job done, and the Denver print- ers agreed to do it in two weeks, whereas we could not have had the work done here in less than a month. Furthermore, I don't believe we could get the same kind of work done on our varicolored posters as we secured from the Denver printers."
The resolution adopted by the union are as follows:
Whereas, The Colorado Springs Chamber of Commerce in direct vio- lation of its adopted slogan, "Patron- ize Home Industry," has seen fit to pat- ronize outside printers, giving them preference over our home industries, work that should have been done here and rightly belongs at home; therefore, be it
Resolved, That the Colorado Springs Printing Pressmen and Assistants union condemn this action of the Colo- rado Springs Chamber of Commerce as most unfair and harmful to our local printing industry.

Plans for the fall work in the Edu- cational department are being started. During September Miss A. Elizabeth Todd, Domestic Science teacher of the Y. W. C. A., will give four free cook- ing demonstrations, illustrating com- parative food values. Anyone inter- ested will be invited to attend the dem- onstrations.

As there was such an interest mani- fested in the Folk dancing class, held recently in connection with the county institute for teachers, the Y. W. C. A. has secured the services of Miss Hatty- May Bennett to teach a similar class. This class is to be organized at the request of a number of public school teachers who are planning to teach Folk dancing in the grade schools. However, the membership will not be limited to teachers. Further informa- tion can be secured at the Y. W. C. A. office, 320 DeGraff building.

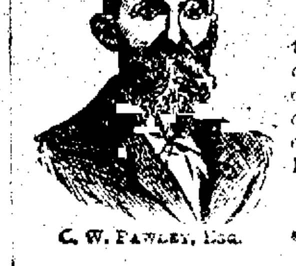

A bath of unslaked lime, bran and water will bleach ivory, which should be rubbed with dry sawdust afterward.

NATURE'S LAWS.

Nature's laws are perfect if only we obey them, but disease follows disobedience. Go straight to Nature for the cure, to the forest; there are mysteries there, some of which we can fathom for you. ## AMERICAN FORCED TO DO MENIAL WORK AND MISTREATED BY REBELS

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug 10.—A tale of adventure and suffering in Mexico was told here by William Bender, who said he had arrived from the southern republic by way of Nogales, Ariz. He told of his capture as a spy, of having been held as a prisoner by his rebel captors who made a slave of him, of being condemned to death by a court martial, of his escape and tramp of 400 miles to reach the United States

Bender said he was born in Germany but became an American when his father was naturalized He was sent to Cornell university, he continued, and was graduated with the degree of civil engineer. He joined the National guard after his graduating and became a first lieutenant in the Ninth regiment of New York Later he returned to Germany and spent a year of voluntary service in the German army

Bender, according to his account, returned to Mexico and went on a prospecting trip in Chihuahua In the mountains he was stopped and searched by rebels They found his National guard uniform and arrested him as an American spy The rebels held him captive for eight months he said and made him do the menial work whenever they went into a camp.

"I had heard of the foulness of Mexican prisons, but I never imagined that there could be a place so awful as that into which I was thrown" he said "One day the guards threw me into a cell where there were two rattlesnakes with the hope that they would kill me I killed the snakes The same performance was repeated a few days later

Finally said Bender he was condemned to be shot but he made friends with one of his guards who aided him to escape In making his way to the west coast he had to cross a river on a log but the current carried him along for 18 hours before he succeeded in reaching the banks Bender said that after many hardships he reached Mazatlan but being unable to obtain work tramped to Nogales where he earned enough money to pay his railway fare to this city

BABY'S HAIR CAME OUT IN BUNCHES

Layer of Scales on Top of Head. Crust Thick and Yellow. Almost Bald. Itched and Burned Badly. Cross and Fretful. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Effected Cure.

510 East Washington St., Portland, Ore. — "When my brother was one month old a layer of scales or scabs began to form on the top of his head. The trouble began as a rash. The scales increased until several layers thick. The crust was thick and yellow and looked to be all in one piece but came off in large scales. His hair came out in bunches and baby became almost bald. His scalp itched and burned so badly as to make him cross and fretful.

"We used every remedy recommended by our friends without success. Then we started with the sample of Cuticura Soap and Ointment, washing his head good with the Cuticura Soap and then applying the Cuticura Ointment. Before they were used up we could see an improvement in his condition and bought some more. The scales loosened and came off easily. In about two months after we started to use Cuticura Soap and Ointment the scales had entirely disappeared and his hair started to come in thickly. Cuticura Soap and Ointment effected a complete cure." (Signed) Miss Ella Ehrlich, Mar. 11, 1912.

Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment are sold throughout the world. Liberal sample of each mailed free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. T, Boston."

Tender-faced men should use Cuticura Soap Shaving Stick, 25c. Sample free.

Campbell Morgan's Lesson Helps for Sunday School Teachers

Brief, Practical and Valuable Comments on the International Sunday School Lessons for the Year 1911.

A TROUBLED SEA AND A TROUBLED SOUL

Golden Text, Psalm xlvi:1-2.
"God is our Refuge and Strength,
A very present help in trouble.
Therefore will we not fear, though the earth do change,
And though the mountains be moved in the heart of the seas."
—Mark iv:35; v:20.

(35) And on that day, when even was come, he saith unto them, Let us go over unto the other side. (36) And leaving the multitude, they take him with them, even as he was, in the boat. And other boats were with him. (37) And there ariseth a great storm of wind, and the waves beat into the boat, insomuch that the boat was now filling. (38) And he himself was in the stern asleep on the cushion: and they awake him, and say unto him, Master, carest thou not that we perish? (39) And he awoke, and rebuked the wind, and said unto the sea, Peace, be still. And the wind ceased, and there was a great calm. (40) And he said unto them, Why are ye fearful? Have ye not yet faith? (41) And they feared exceedingly, and said one to another, Who then is this, that even the wind and the sea obey him?

(1) And they came to the other side of the sea, into the country of the Gerasenes. (2) And when he was come out of the boat, straightway there met him out of the tombs a man with an unclean spirit, (3) who had his dwelling in the tombs; and no man could any more bind him, no, not with a chain; (4) because that he had been often bound with fetters and chains, and the chains had been plucked asunder by him, and the fetters broken in pieces; and no man had the strength to tame him. (5) And always, night and day, in the tombs and in the mountains, he was crying out, and cutting himself with stones. (6) And when he saw Jesus from afar, he ran and worshiped him; (7) and crying out with a loud voice, he saith, What have I to do with thee, Jesus, thou Son of the Most High God? I adjure thee by God, torment me not. (8) For he said unto him, Come forth, thou unclean spirit, out of the man. (9) And he asked him, What is thy name? And he saith unto him, My name is Legion, for we are many. (10) And he besought him much that he would not send them away out of the country. (11) Now there was there on the mountain side a great herd of swine feeding. (12) And they besought him, saying, Send us into the swine, that we may enter into them. (13) And he gave them leave. And the unclean spirits came out, and entered into the swine: and the herd rushed down the steep into the sea, in number about 2,000; and they were choked in the sea. (14) And they that fed them fled, and told it in the city, and in the country. And they came to see what it was that had come to pass. (15) And they come to Jesus, and behold him that was possessed of devils, sitting, clothed and in his right mind, even him that had the legion: and they were afraid. (16) And they that saw it declared unto them how it befell him that was possessed with devils, and concerning the swine. (17) And they began to beseech him to depart from their borders. (18) And as he was entering into the boat, he that had been possessed with devils besought him that he might be with him. (19) And he suffered him not, but saith unto him, Go to thy home unto thy friends, and tell them how great things the Lord hath done for thee, and how he had mercy on thee. (20) And he went his way, and began to publish in Decapolis how great things Jesus had done for him: and all men did marvel.

The story of our lesson is full of light and shadow, of surprise and revelation, of rebuke and encouragement. We shall come to the real value of the Golden Text best by first considering the story, and then returning to the text itself.

The story, as our title indicates, is that of "A Troubled Sea and a Troubled Soul." The central figure here, as always, is that of the Lord himself. Let us first then go through the lesson, looking at him.

He is introduced to us as one conscious of weariness. That is the significance of the little phrase, "as he was," which Mark employs in telling us that they took him with them in the boat: and we immediately see him sleeping in the stern of the boat, and continuing to do so, notwithstanding the fact of the sweeping of the storm around him.

We next observe him acting in power, first in the stilling of the storm by a word, and presently by a word also casting out the demons from the man possessed. Thus in the material and mental realms he is again revealed as all-powerful.

The final picture of him is in certain senses most strange, for we see him limited by the decision of a hostile city. They requested him to depart, and immediately the exercise of his power was stayed and, entering into a ship, he crossed back again to the other side.

Now, passing over the story again, let us observe with equal care the men who were brought into contact with him. First, the disciples, who, in the earlier part of the narrative, are seen in full sympathy with him, and in response to his request, ministering to his need, as they delivered him from the crowd by taking him into the boat, and giving him the opportunity for the rest he needed. Our next picture of them is that of their attitude under circumstances of peril occasioned by the fierceness of the storm. They were filled with fear, and in their extremity awoke him from his slumber, and sought his help. The last picture is that of their perplexity in the presence of his exercise of authority and power over the troubled sea. Said they one to another, "Who then is this, that even the wind and sea obey him?"

We next see the demoniac in contact with Jesus. His condition was indeed a terrible one. So fierce and awful had his madness been that men had been utterly unable to tame him and he had dwelt in the tombs and in the mountains, filling the neighborhood with fear, and inflicting injury upon himself. This man, by a word of power, Jesus delivered from the demons, and restored him to his own manhood. When presently the Master departed, he earnestly desired to be allowed to accompany him; but was dismissed to service as he was told to proclaim to his house and his friends how great things the Lord had done for him.

Lastly, we see the men of the city, necessarily and inevitably impressed by the wonder that Jesus had wrought in their midst. That wonder of the deliverance of the man had been accompanied by a very definite rebuke of their unholy traffic as he had permitted the demons to enter the swine and destroy them. This action filled them with fear, and notwithstanding the benefit which he had conferred upon them by the healing of the man, they besought him to depart.

Once again, we see the attitude of demons in his presence. They knew him. While in the presence of his manifested power over the sea, his disciples were asking, "Who, then, is this?" the demons asked no such question, but named him, "Jesus, thou Son of the Most High God." They also were filled with fear in his presence, and yet were compelled to obey his command.

The Golden Text speaks by contrast with the action of his disciples in the midst of the storm, calling us to the exercise of a faith higher than that which they manifested. In the sweeping of the storm, when the seas were lashed into fury, they were filled with fear, and the unworthiness of the fear is revealed in the fact that while in quick and gracious response to their appeal he stilled the raging of the storm, he followed this action by rebuking them as he asked them, "Why are ye fearful? Have ye not faith?" We are called to that attitude which finds expression in the words of the psalmist, and hard as the lesson is to learn, it is nevertheless one that must be faced, that it is a finer thing to be certain that while he is in the boat it cannot sink, and thus to rest in that assurance without asking for deliverance, than to be brought in response to such request into circumstances of calm. Better the storm without the rebuke than the calm accompanied thereby.

The question which naturally arises in our mind as to how it is possible for us to have such faith, and the complete answer to the inquiry is suggested by the first word of the Golden Text, "God," and by the declaration made, "God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble." To be perfectly sure of God is to know that no storm can destroy those who are with him, however frail the vessel in which they sail may appear to be. For us the God referred to in the Golden Text has been revealed in Jesus, and herein lies the essential value of this particular story, for to see him as he is here revealed, is to be inspired to such confidence as will enable us calmly without fear in the midst of the fiercest storms. Let the final word be one in which we remind ourselves that his only limitation is created by our refusal to admit him to the place of supremacy over all our lives.

BATTLES BETWEEN FIRE-FLIES

From the Strand Magazine.

In an interesting article, descriptive of the Japanese fire-fly, Mr. Mock Joya, the author, says: "Once in a while many millions of white lights form a great mass and fly about in a body, illuminating a vast space, extending many hundred yards. The mass of fire-flies travels many miles and their flight can be perceived from leagues away. If they meet another squadron of fire-flies from another section they rush and mingle into one. It is a battle between two armies of fire-flies. When they mingle many drop dead into the water, as the heroes of the great struggle. Along the Uji river there are many fire-fly battles, and crowds of spectators assemble there to witness the beautiful sight. Over the river millions of fire-flies gather and prepare for the coming battle. They march across the river, over the forest, and back again to the river, waiting for the arrival of their enemy. The maneuver is most wonderful; not a single fire-fly fails to move in perfect order, as if under a commanding general. Soon the invaders are seen, flying in a mass of bright yellow, while the home army advances to meet the enemy. The two great masses of light make a headlong charge, and for a few minutes there is a chaotic struggle in the air, while the wounded and dead drop fast into the water, which is brightly illuminated by the reflection of the fighting light above. When one army vanquishes the other they slowly return to their own river, still in perfect line and order. It is the march of triumph home."

The last count of the world's volcanoes showed a total of 672, of which 270 were classed as active.

KILLED SELF BY TAMPERING IN POLITICS

Military League Now Master of Affairs — Situation Very Critical

By FREDERICK WERNER.

BERLIN, Aug. 10.—Political interest in Europe at present is centered around two capitals, Constantinople and St. Petersburg, for nobody pays much attention to what is happening in Portugal, and everywhere else things are quiet.

Certain statesmen have been following events in Turkey with great interest ever since the war with Italy broke out, but it cannot be denied that opinion here has undergone a great change during the last 10 months. The outbreak of the war came as a rather unpleasant surprise to Germany, whose relations with both beligerents were friendly, Italy being our ally and Turkey, in a way, our ward. At first the sympathy was with the Italians, whose marvellous promptness and masterly transport of their troops across the sea were greatly admired, but gradually, however, a strong feeling in favor of Turkey set in, and it is with great regret that the German people realize that as matters now stand in Turkey, every hope of that country retaining Tripoli and Cyrenacia must be given up. Statesmen, however, realize that from an international point of view, Italy's possession of these provinces is desirable.

Military League Is Master.

In Turkey itself events have evolved with such amazing rapidity that one hardly realizes that the Young Turkish party which three years ago swept everything before them and drove Abdul Hamid into exile in practically no time are now crushed and beaten by the very elements which originally carried the party into power. Now, as then, it is the Turkish army at Salonika that has brought about the revolution and it is the Military league which is master of the situation.

Nobody can have any pity with the Committee of Union of Progress which has certainly itself made the bed on which it must lie. They have had every chance of success, for when three years ago they proclaimed themselves the saviors of the country the Turkish people believed and trusted them, but they have made not the slightest endeavor to keep a single promise and their career has been one long row of unchecked violence and misdeeds.

The Military league which has now taken upon itself the hazy task of setting the house of Osmanli in order was formed barely a year ago by a major of infantry, of formerly an enthusiastic admirer and follower of the committee, whose evident sincerity soon made men flock to his banners.

Signed Own Death Warrant.

The committee signed its own death warrant when after the dissolution of the Turkish parliament at the beginning of the year it decided to tamper with the elections and no subterfuges were left untried to secure the election of only government supporters. Opposition candidates were thrown into prison or poisoned and the people of the country then realized that their position was now far worse than under Abdul Hamid when they had only one tyrant to fear while now the number of petty tyrants run up into many hundreds.

The Military league has triumphed all over the line and it seems determined to clean the augean stable thoroughly but the process will at least temporarily throw the whole empire into confusion for every nominee of the Committee of Union and Progress will be removed from office, a dangerous experiment at a time like the present.

The situation in Turkey certainly is very critical. Much is expected from the new cabinet, which the bayonets of the military have now forced upon the weak, inexperienced Mohammed V. It is composed of some of the ablest men in Turkey—statesmen and soldiers who have grown gray in the service of their country. Moukhtar Pasha, the new grand vizier, is now in his eightieth year. He has filled administrative positions in Albania, Crete and Egypt. He covered himself with glory in he Russo-Turkish war of 1877, and the proud title of ghazi, meaning victorious, was conferred upon him for his success against the Russian hosts in Asia Minor.

PARIS IS A DULL AND DREARY PLACE

Plenty of Foreign Visitors, but Witty People of Importance Are Gone

By GEORGE DUFRESNE.

PARIS, Aug. 10.—Paris, in August is not a very interesting place, in spite of the fact that our streets, thanks to our faithful foreign visitors, are as bustling as ever. There is a semblance of life, but life itself has departed. Look at our daily papers: why, they are so hopelessly dry and dull that you might almost take them to be English, for every writer of any importance has gone to the seashore or mountainside. In former years, at least one gifted journalistic writer, old Henry Rochefort, has remained with us and delighted us with the witty articles of his pointed pen, but this year even the pleasure of reading the old enthusiast and fire-eater's editorials has been taken from us. Not willingly has the octogenarian youth, who did so much in overthrowing "Napoleon le Petit" and establishing the republic, laid down his pen. His mind is as young as ever, his faith in his ideals is unshaken, his patriotism as strong as 50 years ago, and the ideas still crowd each other in his wonderful brain, but his body has grown frail in ceaseless fighting and his doctors have peremptorily forbidden him to write another line until he has had a long rest. Henri Rochefort and rest! The two are incommensurable, and what has happened can mean only one thing. The old journalistic war horse will never again return to the journalistic arena, and we shall never read another of his stirring, witty and scathing articles.

As a poor substitute for Rochefort's stinging lashes, we are daily treated to the malodorous outbursts in the "Guerre Sociale," by Gustave Herve, the harmless antimilitarist, whom the president pardoned the day after the [illegible] review at Longchamps, on Bastille day, and who rewarded the executive by publicly insulting him in an open letter. Antimilitarism is hopelessly dead in France, and Herve, whoever knows this cannot forgive the authorities for depriving him of his martyr's crown, and the result is a series of articles from his pen so disgustingly coarse and gross that one is shocked to think that the writer once occupied a professor's chair at a college.

UNDER THE SHADOW OF THE GERMAN EAGLE.

The brooding First Lord of the Admiralty, Winston Churchill, from a photograph taken at Spithead during the review of the English fleet, which is declared too small to scare away the German war specter.

England, Having Reached Limit of Her Power to Build Ships Out of Her Revenue, Is Talking of Borrowing to Keep Up With Germany's Deadly Pace in Navy and Army Building--Latter Country Refuses to Limit Self

LONDON, Aug. 10—Winston Churchill's speech as first lord of the admiralty, submitting the supplementary naval estimates to the house of commons, has startled England from her complacent sense of security even more violently than when, during the Moroccan crisis last year, the news leaked out that the British fleet authorities had suspended leaves of absence, and had steam up, ready to strike.

Germany spent $254,000,000 on her army and navy in 1911. Great Britain spent $322,000,000 in the same period. The increases now planned will raise Germany's expenditures to well over $300,000,000 and Great Britain's to $350,000,000.

England is reaching the limit of her power to build ships out of her revenue, and already there is talk of borrowing to keep up with Germany's deadly pace.

What can the end be?

There are only three possible solutions:

First, an agreement with Germany for the limitation of armaments. This is pronounced impracticable by Germans, who refuse to bind themselves to a limitation that would place them in a hopeless position of permanent inferiority.

Second, resolution, with a rise to power of the Socialists, who would do away with armies and navies.

Third, war.

As England will never consent to a limitation of armaments which will give Germany equal strength with her own, and as Germany will never consent to a limitation that will leave her in the place of permanent inferiority, the solution of the problem appears to rest between the last two named possibilities—namely, revolution and war.

Reported Dead, Young Man Must Remain So in Eyes of French Law

PARIS, Aug. 10.—The appearance of a man at the moment when what was supposed to be his body was being placed in the coffin, led to a dramatic scene at Courbevoie, a Paris suburb.

On Friday night a young man threw himself into the Seine from the Pont de Neuilly. Yesterday morning a corpse was recovered and was identified by a boy named Arrias as his 19-year-old brother Hubert, who had disappeared from home after a quarrel. The corpse having also been identified by the mother, the authorities gave permission for the remains to be taken to Mme. Arrias' house for the funeral.

The death certificate was made out and signed, and at noon friends and relatives assembled for the funeral. Mme. Arrias had promised her son a new suit of clothes for the national fete, and with touching affection insisted on the body being dressed in the new garments.

The undertakers were fastening down the coffin when shrieks were heard from the staircase, and a woman cried, "It is he! The corpse has come to life! Help!" Amid screams the mourners made a rush for the street.

In the midst of the din Hubert Arrias walked upstairs and explained that he had decided to live at a hotel in future, but remembering his mother's promised present had come for his clothes. He was most indignant to find that a corpse was dressed in them.

The young man is still a corpse in the eyes of the law. At the mayoralty, where he called to announce his return to life, he was informed politely that he was dead. He has now retired to the country pending his recall to life by the Seine tribunal.

New Ammunition Test Stopped by Slight Accident

LONDON, Aug. 10.—An extraordinary accident occurred on the Pirbright ranges during practice for one of the rapid team shoots. A corporal of the Third Worcesters, using the new high velocity mark VII government ammunition, with the pointed bullet, had a cartridge jammed in the chamber.

Through an unexplained cause the extractor did not work properly, and the pointed bullet of the next cartridge coming out of the magazine hit the cap and exploded the other one. The cartridges in the magazine were burst open, the bullet stuck in the barrel, and the case blew back and burst, but the firer escaped with slight injury to his right hand. This [illegible] ex[illegible] experimental stage [illegible] tion of the latest ammunition stands

MORE FOREBODINGS HAUNT THE ENGLISH

Can See Germany With New Oil-Burning Warship Gaining Supremacy of Sea

By PHILLIP EVERETT.

LONDON, Aug. 10.—No vessel ever came to England in time of peace has probably even been the indirect cause of so much anxiety and alarm to the government as the big Danish motor ship, "Selandia," which arrived here the first time four months ago, and which has just left the port of London for her second trip to East India. The success of this vessel means that oil will displace coal in the navy, that the internal combustion engine will banish the steam engine, and that in a comparatively few years, every battleship and cruiser in the British navy will be antiquated and outclassed, for not only will motor battleships be less vulnerable, and steered with much greater ease, but they will be able to carry heavier guns and armor, freed from the enormous weight of boilers and coal. It has not believed the public mind in England that the kaiser's friend, Herr Ballin, of the Hamburg-American line, has bought the only other large motor ship from the Danish East Asiatic company and that the results of all the tests which it will be put through will be at the disposal of the German government; that in the strict secrecy of Germany's naval dockyards may put down and finish motor battleships before the fact of this may become known in England.

Must Build New Navy.

Just as Great Britain had to build a new navy at the time when steam replaced sails, she will have to do so again, now that oil is about to drive out coal; but while a country rich in coal, like England, had the advantage when the former change came, she will now be severely handicapped, because nowhere in the British empire is oil found in such quantities as will be needed before long. To the dread of not being able to get food supplies in times of war, which has long been haunting England, now comes the dread of being cut off from the supply of oil abroad which is to insure the fighting strength of England's floating line of defense.

Quick and alert as First Lord of the Admiralty Mr. Churchill always is, he immediately grasped the importance of the new invention and he was among the very first to inspect the "Selandia" during her first visit, and it is also he who has seen the necessity of appointing a royal commission to decide what is to be done on the eve of a new revolution on sea.

LESS OPPOSITION TO NEW MEASURE

LABOR INSURANCE LAW OPPOSED BY PAPERS

But for Violent Agitation in Press Bitterness Would Not Be Noticeable

By PHILIP EVERETT.

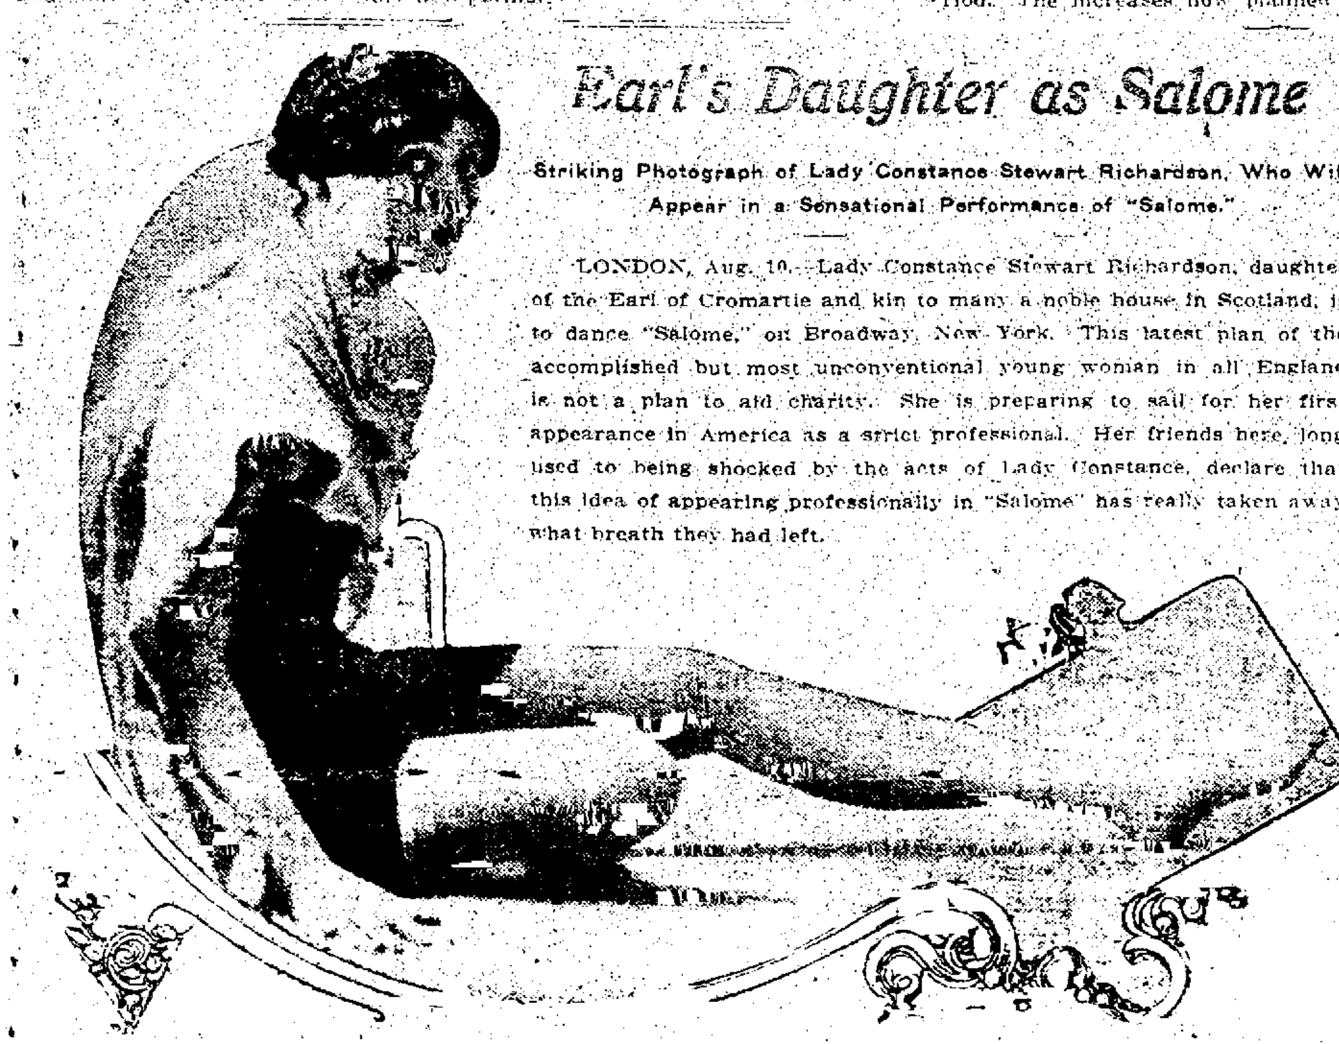

LONDON, Aug. 10.—Parliament has dispersed and the politicians have scattered all over the country to enjoy a well-earned vacation, but in the press political agitation goes on with undiminished fervor and it is as usual the measure accomplished and planned of Lloyd George, which supply the ammunition during these otherwise dead months. Like a threatening cloud in the horizon hangs the chancellor's intended revision of the domesday book, but directly overhead and affecting us all is the labor insurance law, which came partly into force a little over two weeks ago and which will be in full force in October. Against this measure which for campaign purposes was originally hailed with loud cheers of welcome even by the most bitter opponents of the liberal government the whole conservative press is now using its heaviest artillery.

So unscrupulous has one sensational conservative paper, the Daily Mail, been in the choice of its arguments, that it has repeatedly encouraged its readers to break the law of the land.

Does Not Practice What It Preaches.

In the meantime the fact that it has come to the knowledge of the people that the paper in question does not practice what it preaches, has deprived its arguments of much of their force, for while it has encouraged its readers to refuse to pay the weekly insurance premiums demanded by the law, it does not want to be fined itself for breaking the law, and enormous posters all over its premises are informing all its employes that they must fulfill the requirements of the law or leave their jobs.

The fact is, though the conservative press has succeeded in fanning up considerable bitterness among the people against a law which keeps them out of want and insures them medical attention while they are sick, the opposition to the measure, which has been praised and is being imitated all over Europe, is rapidly disappearing, and but for violent agitation in the press it would have disappeared entirely long before this.

Earl's Daughter as Salome

Striking Photograph of Lady Constance Stewart Richardson, Who Will Appear in a Sensational Performance of "Salome."

LONDON, Aug. 10.—Lady Constance Stewart Richardson, daughter of the Earl of Cromartie and kin to many a noble house in Scotland, is to dance "Salome," on Broadway, New York. This latest plan of the accomplished but most unconventional young woman in all England is not a plan to aid charity. She is preparing to sail for her first appearance in America as a strict professional. Her friends here, long used to being shocked by the acts of Lady Constance, declare that this idea of appearing professionally in "Salome" has really taken away what breath they had left.

Ex-Sultan in Terror of Assassins

SALONICA, Aug. 10.—Terror of the past conjured up in a thousand different forms is slowly killing Abdul Hamid, the deposed head of the Ottoman empire, and his death may be expected any day, it is learned here on good authority. To see and talk with the former sultan in his place of imprisonment is next to impossible, for the constant fear of assassination makes him chary about receiving any visitors. He is a sad and miserable spectacle, spending the last days of his life in fear of the specter of an assassin with knife, poised ready to strike, and do what he may he cannot rid himself of this horrible fear. ## YOUNG TURKISH PARTY CRUSHED

KILLED SELF BY TAMPERING IN POLITICS

Military League Now Master of Affairs — Situation Very Critical

By FREDERICK WERNER.

BERLIN, Aug. 10.—Political interest in Europe at present is centered around two capitals, Constantinople and St. Petersburg, for nobody pays much attention to what is happening in Portugal, and everywhere else things are quiet.

Certain statesmen have been following events in Turkey with great interest ever since the war with Italy broke out, but it cannot be denied that opinion here has undergone a great change during the last 10 months. The outbreak of the war came as a rather unpleasant surprise to Germany, whose relations with both belligerents were friendly, Italy being our ally and Turkey, in a way, our ward. At first the sympathy was with the Italians, whose marvellous promptness and masterly transport of their troops across the sea were greatly admired, but gradually, however, a strong feeling in favor of Turkey set in, and it is with great regret that the German people realize that as matters now stand in Turkey, every hope of that country retaining Tripoli and Cyrenacia must be given up. Statesmen, however, realize that from an international point of view, Italy's possession of these provinces is desirable.

Military League Is Master.

In Turkey itself events have evolved with such amazing rapidity that one hardly realizes that the Young Turkish party which three years ago swept everything before them and drove Abdul Hamid into exile in practically no time are now crushed and beaten by the very elements which originally carried the party into power. Now, as then, it is the Turkish army at Salonika that has brought about the revolution and it is the Military league which is master of the situation.

Nobody can have any pity with the Committee of Union of Progress which has certainly itself made the bed on which it must lie. They have had every chance of success, for when three years ago they proclaimed themselves the saviors of the country the Turkish people believed and trusted them, but they have made not the slightest endeavor to keep a single promise and their career has been one long row of unchecked violence and misdeeds.

The Military league, which has now taken upon itself the heavy task of setting the house of Osmanli in order, was formed barely a year ago by a major of infantry of formerly an enthusiastic admirer and follower of the committee, whose evident sincerity soon made men flock to his banners.

Signed Own Death Warrant.

The committee signed its own death warrant when after the dissolution of the Turkish parliament at the beginning of the year it decided to tamper with the elections and no subterfuges were left untried to secure the election of only government supporters. Opposition candidates were thrown into prison or poisoned, and the people of the country then realized that their position was now far worse than under Abdul Hamid when they had only one tyrant to fear while now the number of petty tyrants run up into many hundreds.

The Military league has triumphed all over the line and it seems determined to clean the augean stable thoroughly but the process will at least temporarily throw the whole empire into confusion for every nominee of the Committee of Union and Progress will be removed from office, a dangerous experiment at a time like the present.

The situation in Turkey certainly is very critical. Much is expected from the new cabinet, which the bayonets of the military have now forced upon the weak, inexperienced Mohammed V. It is composed of some of the ablest men in Turkey, statesmen and soldiers who have grown gray in the service of their country. Moukhtar Pasha, the new grand vizier, is now in his eightieth year. He has filled administrative positions in Albania, Crete and Egypt. He covered himself with glory in he Russo-Turkish war of 1877, and the proud title of ghazi, meaning victorious, was conferred upon him for his success against the Russian hosts in Asia Minor.

PARIS IS A DULL AND DREARY PLACE

Plenty of Foreign Visitors, but Witty People of Importance Are Gone

By GEORGE DUFRESNE.

PARIS, Aug. 10.—Paris, in August is not a very interesting place, in spite of the fact that our streets, thanks to our faithful foreign visitors, are as bustling as ever. There is a semblance of life, but life itself has departed. Look at our daily papers: why, they are so hopelessly dry and dull that you might almost take them to be English, for every writer of any importance has gone to the seashore or mountainside. In former years, at least one gifted journalistic writer, old Henry Rochefort, has remained with us and delighted us with the witty articles of his pointed pen, but this year even the pleasure of reading the old enthusiast and fire-eater's editorials has been taken from us. Not willingly has the octogenarian youth, who did so much in overthrowing "Napoleon le Petit" and establishing the republic, laid down his pen. His mind is as young as ever, his faith in his ideals is unshaken, his patriotism as strong as 50 years ago, and the ideas still crowd each other in his wonderful brain, but his body has grown frail in ceaseless fighting and his doctors have peremptorily forbidden him to write another line until he has had a long rest. Henri Rochefort and rest! The two are incommensurable, and what has happened can mean only one thing. The old journalistic war horse will never again return to the journalistic arena, and we shall never read another of his stirring, witty and scathing articles.

As a poor substitute for Rochefort's stinging lashes, we are daily treated to the malodorous outbursts in the "Guerre Sociale," by Gustave Herve, the harmless antimilitarist, whom the president pardoned the day after the brilliant review at Longchamps, on Bastille day, and who rewarded the executive by publicly insulting him in an open letter. Antimilitarism is hopelessly dead in France, and Herve, whoever knows this cannot forgive the authorities for depriving him of his martyr's crown, and the result is a series of articles from his pen so disgustingly coarse and gross that one is shocked to think that the writer once occupied a professor's chair at a college.

UNDER THE SHADOW OF THE GERMAN EAGLE.

The brooding First Lord of the Admiralty, Winston Churchill, from a photograph taken at Spithead during the review of the English fleet, which is declared too small to scare away the German war specter.

England, Having Reached Limit of Her Power to Build Ships Out of Her Revenue, Is Talking of Borrowing to Keep Up With Germany's Deadly Pace in Navy and Army Building—Latter Country Refuses to Limit Self

LONDON, Aug. 10—Winston Churchill's speech as first lord of the admiralty, submitting the supplementary naval estimates to the house of commons, has startled England from her complacent sense of security even more violently than when, during the Moroccan crisis last year, the news leaked out that the British fleet authorities had suspended leaves of absence, and had steam up ready to strike.

Germany spent $271,000,000 on her army and navy in 1911. Great Britain spent $322,000,000 in the same period. The increases now planned will raise Germany's expenditures to well over $300,000,000 and Great Britain's to $350,000,000.

England is reaching the limit of her power to build ships out of her revenue, and already there is talk of borrowing to keep up with Germany's deadly pace.

What can the end be?

There are only three possible solutions:

First, an agreement with Germany for the limitation of armaments. This is pronounced impracticable by Germans, who refuse to bind themselves to a limitation that would place them in a hopeless position of permanent inferiority.

Second, revolution, with a rise to power of the Socialists, who would do away with armies and navies.

Third, war.

As England will never consent to a limitation of armaments which will give Germany equal strength with her own, and as Germany will never consent to a limitation that will leave her in the place of permanent inferiority, the solution of the problem appears to rest between the last two named possibilities, namely, revolution and war.

Reported Dead, Young Man Must Remain So in Eyes of French Law

PARIS, Aug. 10.—The appearance of a man at the moment when what was supposed to be his body was being placed in the coffin, led to a dramatic scene at Courbevoie, a Paris suburb.

On Friday night a young man threw himself into the Seine from the Pont de Neuilly. Yesterday morning a corpse was recovered and was identified by a boy named Arrias as his 19-year-old brother Hubert, who had disappeared from home after a quarrel. The corpse having also been identified by the mother, the authorities gave permission for the remains to be taken to Mme. Arrias' house for the funeral.

The death certificate was made out and signed, and at noon friends and relatives assembled for the funeral. Mme. Arrias had promised her son a new suit of clothes for the national fete, and with touching affection insisted on the body being dressed in the new garments.

The undertakers were fastening down the coffin when shrieks were heard from the staircase, and a woman cried, "It is he! The corpse has come to life! Help!" Amid screams the mourners made a rush for the street.

In the midst of the din Hubert Arrias walked upstairs and explained that he had decided to live at a hotel in future, but remembering his mother's promised present had come for his clothes. He was most indignant to find that a corpse was dressed in them.

The young man is still a corpse in the eyes of the law. At the mayoralty, where he called to announce his return to life, he was informed politely that he was dead. He has been referred to the courts, pending his return to life by the Seine tribunal.

New Ammunition Test Stopped by Slight Accident

LONDON, Aug. 10.—An extraordinary accident occurred on the Pirbright ranges during practice for one of the rapid team shoots. A corporal of the Third Worcesters, using the new high velocity mark VII government ammunition, with the pointed bullet, had a cartridge jammed in the chamber.

Through an unexplained cause the extractor did not work properly, and the pointed bullet of the next cartridge coming out of the magazine hit the cap and exploded the other one. The cartridges in the magazine were burst open, the bullet stuck in the barrel, and the case blew back and burst, but the firer escaped with slight injuries to his right hand. This is the ... experimental stage ... of the ... ammunition ...

MORE FOREBODINGS ABOUT THE ENGLISH

By PHILLIP EVERETT.

LONDON, Aug. 10.—No vessel ever came to England in time of peace has probably given been the indirect cause of so much anxiety and alarm to the government as the big Danish motor ship "Selandia," which arrived here the first time four months ago, and which has just left the port of London for her second trip to East India. The success of this vessel means that oil will displace coal in the navy, that the internal combustion engine will banish the steam engine, and that, as a comparatively few years, every battleship and cruiser in the British navy will be antiquated and outclassed, for not only will major battleships be less vulnerable, and steered with much greater ease, but they will be able to carry heavier guns and armor, freed from the enormous weight of boilers and coal. It has not believed the public mind in England that the kaiser's friend, Herr Ballin, of the Hamburg-American line, has bought the only three large motor ship from the Danish East Asiatic company, and that the results of all the tests which it will be put through will be at the disposal of the German government, that in the strict secrecy of Germany's naval dockyards may put down and finish motor battleships before the fact of this may become known in England.

Must Build New Navy.

Just as Great Britain had to build a new navy at the time when steam replaced sails, she will have to do so again now that oil is about to drive out coal; but while a country rich in coal, like England, had the advantage when the former change came, she will now be severely handicapped, because nowhere in the British empire is oil found in such quantities as will be needed before long. To the dread of not being able to get food supplies in times of war, which has long been haunting England, now comes the dread of being cut off from the supply of oil abroad, which is to insure the fighting strength of England's fighting line of defense.

Quick and alert as First Lord of the Admiralty Mr. Churchill always is, he immediately grasped the importance of the new invention, and he was among the very first to inspect the "Selandia" during her first visit, and it is also he who has seen the necessity of appointing a royal commission to decide what is to be done on the eve of a new revolution on sea.

LESS OPPOSITION TO NEW MEASURE

LABOR INSURANCE LAW OPPOSED BY PAPERS

But for Violent Agitation in Press Bitterness Would Not Be Noticeable

By PHILIP EVERETT.

LONDON, Aug. 10.—Parliament has dispersed and the politicians have scattered all over the country to enjoy a well earned vacation, but in the press political agitation goes on with undiminished fervor and it is as usual the measure, "accomplished" and planned of Lloyd George, which supply the ammunition during these otherwise dead months. Like a threatening cloud in the horizon hangs the chancellor's intended revision of the domesday book, but directly overhead and affecting us all is the labor insurance law, which came partly into force a little over two weeks ago and which will be in full force in October. Against this measure which for campaign purposes was originally hailed with loud cheers of welcome even by the most bitter opponents of the liberal government, the whole conservative press is now using its heaviest artillery.

So unscrupulous has one sensational conservative paper, the Daily Mail, been in the choice of its arguments, that it has repeatedly encouraged its readers to break the law of the land.

Does Not Practice What It Preaches.

In the meantime the fact that it has come to the knowledge of the people that the paper in question does not practice what it preaches, has deprived its arguments of much of their force, for while it has encouraged its readers to refuse to pay the weekly insurance premiums demanded by the law, it does not want to be fined itself for breaking the law, and enormous posters all over its premises are informing all its employes that they must fulfill the requirements of the law or leave their jobs.

The fact is, though the conservative press has succeeded in fanning up considerable bitterness among the people against a law which keeps them out of want and insures them medical attention while they are sick, the opposition to the measure, which has been praised and is being imitated all over Europe, is rapidly disappearing, and but for violent agitation in the press it would have disappeared entirely long before this.

LONDON, Aug. 10.—Lady Constance Stewart Richardson, daughter of the Earl of Cromartie and kin to many a noble house in Scotland, is to dance "Salome," on Broadway, New York. She is preparing to sail for her first appearance in America as a strict professional. Her friends here, long used to being shocked by the acts of Lady Constance, declare that this idea of appearing professionally in "Salome" has really taken away what breath they had left.

The Title Hunters

By Henry W. Fischer

Here Is New Light on the Barter and Trade in Titles. It Would Seem to Indicate That the End of the Business of Buying Titled Husbands for Rich American Women Is Not Far Off, and the Odd Feature of the Situation Is That Europe Is Taking the First Step to the Stopping of the Traffic.

CAN it be that the nobility of Europe has a surfeit of American gold?

Is it possible that the aristocracy of the Continent—real and mushroom—would rather court further degeneration and poverty than sanction more matrimonial alliances with our heiresses?

Yet so it would appear from the recent publication in the newspapers of Warsaw and Madrid of two royal orders, which would seem to indicate that about the last thing in the world certain noble houses desire is the union of one of their blood with an American girl.

Not long ago the press of Warsaw, most historic city of Poland, published the fact that all the princes and dukes of Radziwill—there are some dozens of them—were forbidden by the head of the house, Prince George, Duke of Nieswiez, Count of Mir, etc., etc., to go anywhere near the Riviera lest they meet accidentally "that American person who calls herself the wife of our son, Prince Antoine Albrecht."

The "American person" specified by the head of the Radziwill house in his pronunciamento, illegitimatizing her offspring, is no less a person than the beautiful Dorothy Deacon, society belle of Newport and Boston, who was legally wedded to Prince Antoine Albrecht Radziwill in London July 5, 1910.

The other news item, also published recently, appeared in the Madrid newspapers. It was to the effect that King Alphonso of Spain had given the Duke of Alva a bodyguard of dowagers and courtiers "to prevent His Highness from falling into the clutches of some designing American heiress and marrying her."

The fact that the Radziwills and Albas happen to be extremely rich may explain the hostile attitude assumed by Prince George and the ruler of Spain. As for the rest of the old world aristocracy it will doubtless continue to snap up American fortunes and American girls as it has done for the last one hundred and nine years, or ever since Elizabeth Patterson of Baltimore, heiress of the merchant prince, William Patterson, set the fashion by marrying Jerome, afterward king of Westphalia, youngest brother of the great Napoleon.

SHE paid for the privilege of assuming a title, too, as have her successors, for she had to keep her husband during his subsequent stay in America, and probably before their marriage as well.

Since Elizabeth's time six hundred and more American heiresses have bought and paid for European pseudo crowns and coronets badly in need of gilding. More than sixty of these have obtained divorces, five actually sat for awhile on a throne or thronelet, or were entitled to that honor, and all conferred lasting benefits upon the noble, or ignoble, families they married into.

The outward advantage to noble families they enter is generally reckoned in dollars and cents, but the American girls called queens, duchesses, princesses, marchionesses, countesses and baronesses bestowed upon their husbands' line a far more valuable favor—their good, red American blood.

Statistics of England, France, Germany, Italy and Spain prove that in all these strongholds of privileged classes when marriage is restricted to the noble born the nobility dies out, either indirectly on account of degeneration by constant intermarriage or directly by the want of issue, which is merely another way of saying the same thing. The old blood has lost its vigor—the American girl must supply the vanished vitality.

It may be argued that the countrywomen of the debilitated noblesse would serve as well, but these are either ineligible for family reasons or for want of the necessary "dot." Besides, they lack the quality most desirable in the process of rejuvenation—smartness.

On her part the American girl, supplying good, virile blood, health, a nimble mind, and above all else money, proved a powerful asset in the rebuilding of the European aristocracy, and as a rule was cheated out of the perquisites promised in return for her health and wealth.

To begin with, Elizabeth Patterson did not become queen of Westphalia, but had to make way for a German princess; Miss Mary Esther Lee of Brooklyn did not become Princess Frederick of Schleswig-Holstein when she married him, but had to be content with the mushroom title of Princess Noer; Miss Elsie Hensler of Boston, who married the Regent of Portugal, King Ferdinand, was never acknowledged as queen.

"Here lies the Countess of Edla," they wrote on her tombstone.

MARIE EMILY HAMEL of New York was created Countess di Rocca-Guglielma, a name recruited from a novel, when, in fact, she was the wife of Prince Louis of Bourbon, Count of Aquila. She had a son and a daughter by Aquila, but royal records make no mention of them. Finally Prince Albert of Monaco, the gambler-king, divorced his American wife, nee Alice Heine of New Orleans, and banished her from his states.

Yet all these women brought considerable wealth to their lords and had to give it into their keeping without qualification, as is customary with royalty. And some six hundred odd other American women and girls did likewise.

What have they got to show for the beauty, health and wealth they gave to these foreigners? Little but heartbreak and disillusionment.

That Radziwill order, for instance, against the unfortunate Princess Dorothy is simply infamous, for Prince Antoine Albrecht was legally married to Miss Deacon in London July 5, 1910. The Radziwills are Catholics, and the Catholic church does not recognize divorce, yet Princess Dorothy of Radziwill, nee Deacon, is ruthlessly put without the pale of society by the head of her husband's house, and her offspring is declared illegitimate.

And this while her American wealth provides for her husband's maintenance, for Prince Antoine Albrecht doesn't come into his fortune until after the death of his father, who was born in 1880. As the Radziwills are a proverbially long-lived race this American girl may have to keep her Polish husband twenty-five years or longer before he comes into his own. In the meantime her American dollars will be their chief support.

The Radziwills, by the way, are not sovereign princes, but only large landholders, and the curious part of the whole matter is that they raised no objection to the marriage of Miss Pudenziana Milmo of New York to Prince Albert Radziwill, a brother of Antoine.

Albert and the Princess Pudenziana are now living at Castle Poloneczka, in Russia, and are happily mated to all appearances.

THE Duke of Alba, whom King Alphonso pretends to protect against the onslaught of marriage-mad American heiresses, is not a descendant of the famous warrior, to whom our own John Lothrop Motley pays his compliments in the words:

"He literally drank blood for seventy years, causing 18,600 Netherlanders alone to be executed, after undergoing the most awful tortures."

The present Duke's forbear was a natural son of James II. and Arabella Churchill, afterward Mrs. Godfrey. Alba's thirty-nine ducal and princely titles are courtesy titles, one and all, and an American girl marrying him on the supposition of acquiring a historic name, even if it be that of a bloodhound, would be sadly misled.

But it wouldn't be a new experience by any means, for of the six hundred-odd titles won by these international marriages, less than fifty are of genuine historic origin, the overwhelming majority being of comparatively recently manufacture, granted by royalty for a consideration in money or service.

Strange to say, among recent aristocratic marriages, that of the widow of the late New York brewer, Schmidt, proves the most desirable alliance from the nobility standpoint, for the Del Dragos carry their family tree back to 1133, and were at one time sovereign princes.

On the other hand, the Marlboroughs, whose title looms brightest to the American mind, remember as their oldest ancestor a knight living about 1510. The seventeenth century saw them become barons. In 1685 John Churchill became Earl and in 1698 Duke of Marlborough. But the dukedom, as well as the baronies and earldom, were on paper only. Likewise is the case of the German title, Prince of Mindelheim.

For all that, the Duchess of Marlborough, who was Consuelo Vanderbilt, might be a very happy woman if she had no other troubles.

AMONG the American girls that paid perfectly good money for mushroom titles were Lady Abinger, nee Helen Magruder, whose title dates only from 1887; Comtesse d'Aviamon, nee Mary Fischer (title not recognized); Countess Amadei, nee Mary Lewis; Marquise de Suarez d'Aulan, nee Norma Christmas (title not in the peerage); Countess Johann Heinrich von Bernstorff, nee Ella Luckers (family never held a fief or sovereignty); Baroness de Bremont, nee Helen Penniman; Baroness von Bildt, nee Mary Moore; Countess Bodisco, nee Harriet Williams (title unverified); Comtesse de la Boissiere, nee Margaret Dunlap (not in the French peerage); Countess de Brazza-Savorgnan, nee Cora Slocomb, and the Duchess Decazes, nee Isabella Singer.

This last-mentioned title was created in 1815, and the King of Denmark added to it that of Duke of Glucksberg. The Danish nobility is to be abolished and the French nobility will share that fate sooner or later; so the former Isabella Singer's children will be plain Louis and Jacques.

The two American Duchesses de Dino (formerly Adele Sampson and Elizabeth Curtis) secured divorces. The title of Duke de Dino was created in 1815 as an additional fancy name for the great Duke Talleyrand. The ex-husband of the two American women, Maurice, is the fourth duke. Miss Sampson was divorced from Frederick William Stevens before she married Dino.

Aristocrats are always criticizing "upstarts" and sneering at the newly rich, yet the foundation of many of the great American fortunes was laid long before most of the above-mentioned titles of aristocracy were conceived or created.

The Vanderbilts, in finance, are as old as the Imperial Napoleons in politics. While a great many of the marquis' hats and ducal and earl's coronets which our American girls bought and paid for were created by the fourth George and Queen Victoria, the house of Astor dates from the eighteenth century, and several of our most prominent families began to acquire great wealth at the beginning of the nineteenth.

THE Havemeyers' fortunes were laid in the year when Elizabeth Patterson married King Jerome, then a mere lieutenant in the French navy. The Belmonts, Whitneys, Goelets, the Leiters, the Lorillards, the Armours, the Fields, the Mackays and the Morgans—all were exercising power or were powers in international finance while the Dinos, the Decazes, the Boissieres, the Brazzas, etc., were licking a king's or a queen's boots for such miserable titles as they now boast.

A title, taken at its real value, is good for preferment in society and politics. So are millions. But while millions always retain their value titles are subject to decline in these democratic days. France twice abolished them; in Russia only titles bestowed for service count, Italian and Spanish titles are a drug on the market, and the German who accepts a "von" from the Kaiser nowadays is laughed at even in the fatherland.

Many an American mother ran her feet off to obtain for her daughter the title of "lady" to precede her Christian name, yet "lady" means simply "bread-maker"—viz., "chief of the household." The Queen of England in her own house is addressed as "madame," the last syllable of which is derived from the Italian word "dama." And "dama" means "goat."

Hence, if you want to be polite to the Queen, or some other lady, what you really say to her is an insult, if its original meaning, "My goat," obtains.

There are thirty English, Scottish and Irish dukes now all told. There were hundreds of them at the time of Julius Caesar and later, for "duke" merely means "leader" in a political or military sense. "Marquis" stands for the office of march-rider, a horseman that patroled a country's frontiers.

In olden times all the retainers of royal personages were called "counts," which may be translated as "runner," or "one who goes along." The German equivalent is "graf," originally spelled with a "v." The spelling shows the real significance of "grav" or "grau," which is merely gray-head, old man, or man of experience, in whom the king could have confidence.

"Earl" means nothing more or less than "man," while the Latin "nobilis" (our noble) means "excellent." The Romans applied it not only to men, but to horses, furs and—pigs. "Baron" stands for "bearer" (of burdens), a supporter of the king, whose chief office was that of tax collectors.

IN marrying the Prince of Brancaccio Miss Elizabeth Hickan Field didn't secure the sign of a former royal house, but she gained the entree of the Italian court, while in becoming Countess de Rohan Chabot Mrs. Herbert Gallatin, nee Heyward, and widow of the late Herbert Gallatin of New York, entered an ancient family that coined the proud phrase:

"We cannot be kings; we despise the title of duke we are the Rohans."

The Rohans are descendants of the kings and dukes of Brittany, very rich and distinguished. The Countess died at Paris in 1896 without issue.

Prince Ferdinand Colonna, husband of the former Eva Julia Bryant Mackay, is a scapegrace and has made his wife very unhappy, but his family tree reaches back to the time of Julius Caesar. The couple have three children, Andrea and Marc Antonio, boys, and a daughter named Bianca. The latter married Comte Achard de Bonvouloir.

It is said that Mrs. Mackay originally paid several millions hard cash for her stepdaughter's coronet which has proved a crown of thorns.

The history of the Talleyrands, the Manchesters and the Castellanes is too well known to require comment. It is a singular fact that all our American-English and American-French duchesses have had a great deal of marital troubles. There was Lily Price wife of the late Duke of Marlborough; Consuelo Vanderbilt, wife of the present Duke; Consuelo Yznaga, Dowager Duchess of Manchester; Helen Morton, divorced from Count Boson Talleyrand, and Bessie Curtis, divorced from the Marquis de Talleyrand.

THE Talleyrands are an ancient French family, dating from the twelfth century. They derive their present position among the high aristocracy of Europe from the possession of the Duchy of Sagan, a Prussian fief now in the hands of creditors.

As soon as the former Anna Gould succeeds in paying off her father-in-law's and husband's debts connected with the Duchy she will be a semi-sovereign duchess. Her infant son by the former Prince Helie is now styled Prince de Sagan. He will be three years old in July, and among his string of Christian names are at least two reminderful of America—Jason Howard.

Other historic names borne by American women are those of Churchill, now borne by Lady Randolph Churchill, who was Miss Jennie Jerome; Esterhazy, by the Countess Maximilian, who was Sarah Virginia Carroll; Lady Lister-Kaye, who was Miss Natica Yznaga and married into a family descended from one of the boon knights of the Round Table, and Poniatowski, represented by Princess Stanislas, who was Catherine Goddard of New York. Her husband's grandfather sat on the throne of Poland as king.

Of course, when in America we speak of a butler the supposition is that we are not referring to a person in the highest ranks of society. But when a man looks after the wet goods of a king, presto, he is somebody.

Ellen Steger, daughter of an American general, became Lady Arthur Butler, and her husband claims direct descent from one Fitzwailer, butler to Henry II. As "Fitz" means "son of" the original Butler seems to have been the son of a waiter. At any rate, King Henry created him hereditary Chief Butler of Ireland, and every time King George wants to take a drink on the Green Isle the former Miss Steger's husband ought to be around with the bottle and glasses.

Not What He Meant.

'Twas not the month of March, but all the same 'twas gusty and dusty—uncomfortably gusty and dusty.

Particles of the earth in the form of grit filled one's eyes, ears, nose and mouth. Mrs. Frigid, after much struggling against the bluster, at length reached her destination—the grocery store.

"Yes, ma'am?" beamed Sandem, hastening forward and pawing the counter with eager anticipation.

"A pound of tea—and quickly!" came the tart retort.

"Yes'm. Certainly'm. Very dusty to-day, isn't it?"

Sadly Mrs. Frigid turned her eyes from the scales.

"It always is!" she retorted bitterly.

Number One.

"Yes," exclaimed the newly married woman to a bunch of her friends as they sat around the tea table, "for three months after our marriage my husband made me bake hot cakes for him at every meal."

"And yet," chorused her friends, "your husband is a strong, healthy looking fellow."

"Well," asked the lady, "what about that?"

"Oh, the doctors say that such a diet is dreadful, and that"

"But this husband is healthy. I was referring to my first," remarked the lady complacently.

Egerton L. Winthrop, at the end of one of the meetings of the Board of Education in New York, said, apropos of severity in the schoolroom:

"These oversevere teachers always remind me of an oversevere parson. He, at a dinner party during Lent, said to one of the guests, a famous raconteur:

"'My dear sir, as it is Lent—and a Friday to boot—would you mind if I asked you to confine your efforts exclusively to fish stories?'"

"I like George, but he is such a small man. I wish he was taller."

"Well, it's better to have loved a short man than never to have loved a tall."

"They say our new magistrate indulges in mixed metaphors," said a lady to a friend.

"Dreadful!" exclaimed the other. "My husband says it's much better to keep to one liquor."

The Garden grown Snapper

by Royden K. Jones

OAR ye! Hear ye! Hear ye!

Epicures, lobster-fed philosophers and all that delight in the good things of the table, give ear!

e should those, who now chafe at the high cost g, fail in their attention!

r it may be that within a very short time we e able to ignore the insinuating blandishments of ef Trust, and instead of dickering with our over the price of a chop or sirloin, order instead et of luscious terrapin or succulent snapper.

t for long need our purses shrink coyly from the ls of our persistent and ofttimes pernickety pal- hile the price of beef slowly rises toward the for soon the toothsome turtles, in former times ight and despair of the epicure, who was not the or of a Carnegie or a Rockefeller pocketbook, will dentiful as in the days before the first darky chef red that they were good to eat.

r the garden-grown terrapin is the latest product civilization and inventive genius. Also his first the snapper, is become a compatriot of the nd string beans. According to some authorities ter quite equals his better known relation as a le dish, while many do not hesitate to declare e snapper is even the superior of the delectable d-back as a table delicacy.

it however that may be, it is enough that Col. D. rapin and Mr. Snapper will speedily take rank d Major Steer and all the rest of the Beef Trust's as a foodstuff. Hereafter, they will be grown in the same fashion as corn or potatoes, and in en may become equally plentiful.

s remained for the good people of Delaware to ve the problem of repopulating the earth with the ing race of turtles, whose tender flesh has con- d the culinary apex of many a costly feast. They ucceeded so well that unless some unforeseen dis- overtakes the coming snapper crop, within an season or two the turtles will become a staple of diet outside their native State.

s yet the Delaware folk have not raised them in nf numbers to make their export worth while s a matter of fact, those who have engaged in r-culture are too fond of the crop they raise d any of it elsewhere until the local demand has ulfilled. But it needs no prophet to foresee that a comparatively brief space the snapper and the d-back will come into their own again.

aturally, it will take longer to bring this about in se of the latter than the former. The snapper is irly plentiful, in spite of the serious inroads made s population during recent years, while the ter- is actually a minus quantity, even in places where numbered hundreds of thousands.

ence it will probably be several years before the in becomes plentiful again. Terrapin eggs are not dily obtainable as those of the snapper for the s just given, and it may be several seasons before ecome so, but eventually the people of Delaware o see the diamond back as numerous as in the when every swamp and marshy bay was black hem.

t first few but sportsmen and true nature lovers d in the business of raising the young turtles the egg, but as soon as the commercial possibili- f their experiment was realized by the public, ds of others took it up. With the sportsmen thers of their kind it was simply a question of ting the turtles' extinction, which was rapidly brought about. But with the general public ting their efforts, even if from commercial motives, y of the snapper's extinction is probably far off.

ULD you chance to walk in the gardens of some f the Wilmington sportsmen or others engaged in culture during the latter part of August or early mber, you are apt to see anywhere from a dozen ee or four score tiny creeping creatures, hardly than overgrown beetles, tumbling about on the resh earth.

fere and there you will see little piles of newly turned dirt or sand, where the baby snappers or young terrapin have lately broken forth from mother earth.

If you remain perfectly quiet and watch the ground near you, provided your host has indicated where the turtle crop has been planted, you may see one of the young reptiles first view the light. There will be a violent agitation of a previously perfectly quiet spot of ground, perhaps as large as a half-dollar.

Then a tiny, black, beak-like head will suddenly thrust forth, while two beady eyes blink and stare in their first glimpse of earth. A moment later, if you do nothing to startle the newcomer, the young turtle will have effectually dug his way out of the ground where he has reposed quietly enough for several months, and go scampering off to join his newly freed brothers and sisters.

Garden-grown, or to be more accurate, garden-hatched snappers, are a product peculiar to Delaware in general and Wilmington in particular, for it is here that turtle culture originated. Indeed, they are fast becoming just as much a part of the Wilmington folk's garden 'sass,' as beets, peas or any other product of the vegetable kingdom.

THE turtle culturist plants rows of snapper eggs or terrapin, if they are obtainable, along with the seeds from which he expects later to develop a sufficient crop of roasting ears or lima beans for home consumption, and the chances are that he will be far more disappointed if his snapper crop fails to materialize than if his corn and limas fail to sprout.

In a few months after planting, the earth above the eggs begins to break, providing the process of incubation has been successful, and the tiny snappers, then about the size of a quarter, scramble forth to survey the situation. Whereupon the youngsters are taken to a bit of marshland, fenced in by the turtle-culturist, and left to shift for themselves. Next season they will be of sufficient size to market, or for use on the home table.

Of course, when the sportsmen and nature lovers first engaged in the labor of planting the snapper eggs, they did so from purely disinterested motives, and when the young turtles made their appearance they were taken to the nearest swamp and turned loose to wander at will. At first these good turtle samaritans endured much good-natured scoffing, for the idea of planting snapper or terrapin eggs in the garden and raising a crop of young turtles appealed to most people as a nature fake of the first water.

It was not until the first crop of snappers was produced that the public realized the importance of the discovery. It made possible the conservation of the snapper family, which was fast going the way of the diamond back, now almost extinct, and it also foreshadowed a return to its former glory of that King of Turtleland.

THERE were those, however, who did not hesitate to say that the importance of saving the snapper from extinction was of far greater value than the slow process of repopulating the Eastern Shore, where the terrapin once held supreme sway. Epicures of the Peninsula, who once reveled in the delights of the diamond back, at one time so plentiful that the slaves feasted upon them to their heart's content, declare that the snapper is quite the equal of his classic cousin in toothsomeness.

On the other hand, since the practical extinction of terrapin, the snapper has grown rapidly in popularity and has now a place in the hearts of those who love the good things of life, very nearly the same as its predecessor once had.

Snapper soup, stewed snapper and snapper pot-pie are Wilmington dishes which have made several eating places famous in a short time. The sign of the snapper shell is a sight which gladdens the eye of him who has once partaken of the delectable dish and whets the jaded appetite.

More than one cafe of the Delaware metropolis has built up a lucrative business because of its owner's recipe for snapper soup, formerly served as free lunch, but now sold at a very insignificant sum because the license court has frowned upon the free lunch system.

Snapper soup recipes are handed down from one generation to another, just as the recipe for gunpowder is handed down from one generation to another in the millionaire family of Delaware du Ponts.

Naturally the demands made upon the snapper family in order to satisfy the appetites of the Delaware public is rapidly depleting the number of the snapper family, which abounds in the pond, streams and marsh lands along the Delaware River, Delaware and Chesapeake bays. What has hastened the threatened extinction is the fact that the snapper is fattest and possesses the richest flavor during the months of May and June.

Unfortunately for the snapper population, it is at this season that the mother snapper comes up from the ponds and streams to seek the land in order that she may deposit her eggs in the sandy places not far from the water's edge. It is during this period that she falls a prey to the snapper hunter and is converted into snapper soup or served up in some other equally delicious form.

VERY frequently the female snapper is found to contain as many as seventy eggs, and it can readily be seen that the ever increasing demand has been having a serious effect upon the supply.

In a word, during the past few years the snapper has diminished amazingly in numbers. It became apparent two or three years ago that something must be done, and then and there the practice of planting snapper eggs had its inception.

It is believed to have originated with W. H. Hartlove, one of the pioneer sportsmen of Wilmington who is said to possess a recipe for snapper soup which can not be equalled anywhere on the Eastern shore. Joseph W. Wigglesworth, secretary of the Delaware Anglers' Association; George M. Gillespie and a few others took it up until the practice has grown largely.

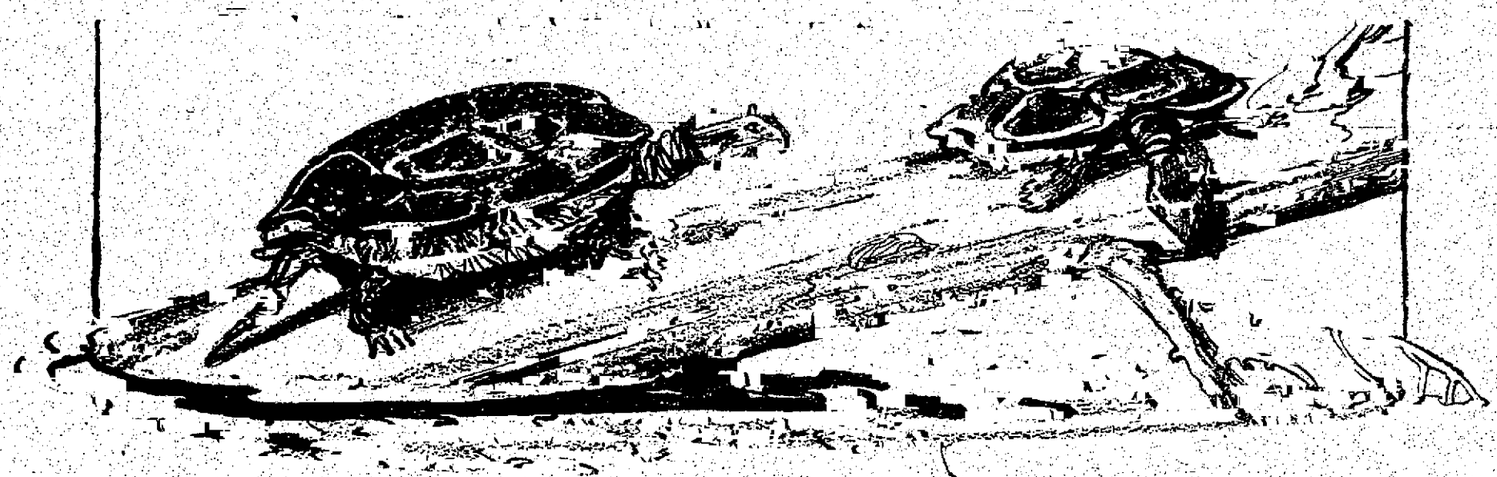

This novel plan of snapper propagation is as follows. When a hen snapper is killed, it is immediately opened and the eggs extracted. The eggs are planted in the garden, in little holes about two or three inches in depth and in a cool, dry place. Sandy soil is preferable, for many snapper-culturists say that they have good luck regardless of the nature of the soil, provided that the eggs are kept in a cool and dry place.

In four months they hatch, and then are liberated practically as soon as they emerge from the earth. Thousands of them have been propagated by Delaware sportsmen during the past two or three years, and the conservation scheme is being successfully pursued, although the increased demand for snapper precludes the possibility of any noticeable effect on their numbers.

Sportsmen everywhere are now planting snapper eggs and hatching going ones and urging others to do so. Many people, as already stated, are doing it for commercial reasons. The sportsmen, however, do not like this phase of the situation, as they say and rightly that this will offset the good effect of their efforts.

Hence they are already considering a bill which will be introduced at the next session of the legislature, looking to the further protection of the snapper. Its exact provisions are not yet agreed upon, but it will be drawn with a view to prevent the capture of the hen-snapper at breeding time, and to authorize the State authorities to raise a snapper crop on their own account.

Which will mean, of course, that it may be a few years before the snapper is sufficiently plentiful for export to other States. So the garden-grown snapper may not be such a boon to humanity after all.

POSING AS A HOT WEATHER PROPOSITION

Some Confidences of Muriel, the Model

"If any model decides to stay in town during the Summer," observed Muriel, the Model, munching a bonbon with an air of serious consideration, "the very first thing for her to do is to every illusion she may have about 'art for art's Oh, yes, some of the girls do cherish ideas of sort—perfectly ridiculous, aren't they?—but they Because it's the Summer time, that shows up just for what it is—a business proposition; and, business, the hot weather is the natural time for ation.

"In other words, it means that you've got to make our mind to take anything in the way of a pose presents itself, including those for advertisements, every good model fights mighty shy of in the season.

"Why? Well, for goodness sake, would you like your own face sandwiched in between an invita- to take a correspondence course in learning to blow am whistle and a popular shaving soap?

"Well, I confess to disliking it, and so do most of irls, however much they may try to forget it, when ercury begins to rise. But then, lots of times pose for advertisements or not pose at all—and must eat.

"Speaking of posing for advertisements, we girls at the club had a good laugh the other day. A us were sitting in the parlor, waiting for tea time explaining the various reasons why none of us spending the Summer in Europe, when the secre- came to the door and asked: 'Is there any one here ans on silk stockings?'

"'I have,' said a girl sitting next to me (we'll call Margaret Buckley, because that isn't at all like her name), and as she was apparently the only one who had, she got the job. A photographer wanted some one right off to pose for some one's 'All Whole' stockings, and had insisted that the model must wear the genuine silk article.

"BUT the very idea of Margaret's getting a job like that made such a hit with the rest of the girls that they positively forgot to be envious. You'd laugh, too, if you could see what those stockings covered. Thin? Well, I should say that attenuated would be a better word in that connection.

"However, the photographer used her and she came back terribly set up—you see, her toothpick-like props had been rather a joke at the club—and she blew in all the money she'd earned on ice cream for the crowd.

"The next day she declared she was going to try for a job as 'show girl'—that imp of mischief Daisie Desmond put her up to it—and off she went, as seriously as could be, with Daisie, for company to see the fun.

"When they got back Margaret was so peeved she wouldn't speak to any of us all afternoon, and Daisie was perfectly limp, she had laughed so. It seems that the manager Margaret saw hadn't anything to do just at the moment, so she applied for a position on his light opera company, saying she had been posing all Winter.

"He asked if she could dance, and she held up her skirts to show him. He gave one look, then sort of collapsed, and told her not to bother. Then he suggested—Daisie said his voice sounded like a gasp, as if he was going to choke in a second or two—that if Margaret could find five other girls with legs as thin as hers he'd try to arrange a stork ballet. It would make a novelty.

"Did she accept? Very far from it. She bounced out perfectly furious, particularly at the way Daisie was chuckling at the manager's suggestion.

"I HOPE that what I have said indicates that the whole posing proposition is by no means the cinch people imagine it to be. It's no joke, take my word for it, especially in Summer, and you have to take jobs that any other time you'd simply turn up your nose at.

"Do you fancy that any girl really likes to walk up and down a showroom, wearing a fur coat, when the thermometer is 90 in the shade—and precious little shade? Some of the girls say they do it 'to reduce,' and it may be that it's true, only I can imagine lots of easier ways to do it.

"Yes, the cloak models get well paid—they ought to, too, take my word for it, for they earn the money. How would you like to promenade up and down the length of a showroom the whole enduring day, hearing men drummers say things that made you simply boil with impotent rage, when if you so much as looked as if you minded it, the proprietors (there are almost always two of them in cloak and suit houses) would call you down!

"And the women buyers! Honestly, nobody ever knows women—really knows them—till they've had to pose for them, either before an easel or in a showroom.

"WHEN I see a girl who's just starting to tread the thorny path of art, as a rule, begins in a hall bedroom and may—though it probably won't—lead to the covers of the magazines, I always take her quietly aside and give her two pieces of advice." The first (really the more valuable, if she only knew it) is to stop before she starts at all; the second is to avoid the whole 'artine' fraternity so far as possible, only keeping them—for a sort of final foothold between her and starvation.

"Do they often take your advice? Well, not so you'd notice it.

"As a rule, they begin to get mad and explain that they're always understood how 'jealous' all old models are of good-looking newcomers, which, naturally, acts as a sort of barrier against one taking any real interest in their future career. If they'd only be sensible, I'd be glad to give them a lot of points, and one tip would be to avoid studios where they have cats or dogs prowling about.

"Yes, I have my own reasons—personal reasons—for saying this.

"It's only a little while since a beast of a cat that made its headquarters in a studio where I was posing for a sculptor who was modeling an angel came and laid a dead mouse right down on my bare foot! What did I do? The sculptor told me afterward he really thought I'd decided to join the company in the sky right off, via the ceiling, for I nearly went through it.

"He was most awfully polite and apologetic, explaining with great care that it was the animal's—he called the cat Venus Adonis, because it was so perfectly hideous—way of making friends. Venus Adonis always brings me his mice,' he assured me, and, actually, he seemed to consider that this was really an excuse for the scare I'd had. Indeed, he felt quite injured when he found that it had unnerved me to such a degree that I had to go home to recover.

"Aren't men queer? But ever since that direful occasion I've made it a point to shun all forms of live stock.

"AS an instance of what you have to do in Summer, not long ago I was engaged the whole week to pose for an illustrator who had a rush job. His wife had a dog and she used to bring him over to her husband's studio every time she wanted to go out.

"Believe me, she didn't stay in much! She declared 'poor little Ducksie—that was the dog—got so lonesome at home.' He was so sensitive and his artistic soul found the maid's most uncongenial! I've always wished I could compare notes with that maid.

"Understand, I have no objection to dogs, or cats either, in their proper places, but how would you like to have a dog watch your foot as if it were a pork chop and, every time you moved it a fraction of an inch, leap at it ravenously?

"And you wearing your best friends new suede pumps, while your own shoes were being mended.

"The artist was just like Venus Adonis' owner. He kept trying to persuade me that it was only the beast's playful way of getting acquainted. But I just couldn't see it.

"Ordinarily, I'd have thrown up the job the first day, but—well, it was Summer, and you do have to put up with disagreeable things sometimes and say nothing. However, in this instance, I had the best of it.

"The artist had to finish the work on a certain date—he'd been rash enough to let me know that in the beginning—and he couldn't do it without me. It was this knowledge that made me bold enough to declare he could choose between Ducksie and me.

"I told him he couldn't have us both—that is, not in the same studio. And Ducksie went!

"But, oh, it's tough to be a model in the Summer time!"

He—My darling, you must be mine. I yearn for you every day.

She—That's all right; but what I want to know is, will you earn for me every day after we are married?

A 20th Century Trilby

By
Merritt Crawford

Is hypnotism about to invade the sacred realm of music?

Will future Pattis, Tetrazzinis, Nordicas, Schumann-Heinks and Carusos be drafted from the ranks of those most susceptible to the powers of the hypnotist?

Is it possible one may become a musical artist merely through auto-suggestion?

In a word, will the endless drudgery and effort now so essential to even the slightest artistic success in every branch of musical endeavor be replaced by the employment of a Svengali?

These and a hundred similar questions are just now perplexing musical experts all over the country, or ever since twenty-two-year-old Marian Graham, "a toneless, voiceless girl," suddenly developed a wonderful soprano voice of marvellous range and quality while under hypnotic control.

Without Her Svengali Miss Graham Is Voiceless.

WHEN George du Maurier first gave to the world his fantastic novel, "Trilby," it gained its tremendous vogue more perhaps by reason of the weird originality of its theme—the soul, cruel though it was, of the musician-hypnotist, Svengali, finding expression through the medium of a voiceless, musicless peasant girl—than because of the intensely human blending of the loves and trials and disappointments of Taffy, the Laird and Little Billee.

Trilby was a study of the weird, the impossible, woven by a master hand into the warp and woof of everyday life. The tragedy of its finale was artistically inevitable.

"It is a good thing," said the public, when it had finished the book, "that a creature like Svengali is impossible. Whatever else hypnotism may do, it certainly cannot supply something that does not exist in the character of a subject."

And for nearly twenty years the public has rested content in this opinion. The possibility that the vampire-like qualities of Svengali were not at all essential to the results he obtained, but merely furnished the element necessary to the artistic perfection of Du Maurier's book, never occurred to any one.

But as not infrequently has been the case, the fantastic imaginings of a master craftsman of literature of one generation have become the realities of the next. Jules Verne wrote of the "Nautilus" voyaging through the ocean's depths and of a trip to the moon, and to-day we have the airship and the submarine.

SIMILARLY had du Maurier lived until now he would have seen his famous character paralleled in all essential particulars.

Miss Marian Graham, the 22-year-old secretary of a large manufacturer in New York City, is the Trilby of real life.

Her employer, Prof. Charles Munter, an expert hypnotist, is Svengali. But he is the Svengali only in the sense that he is able to produce the same musical results in his subject that his fictional prototype created in the sweetheart of Little Billee, and without the attendant tragic possibilities.

A few weeks ago the New York State Music Teachers' Association held their twenty-fourth annual convention and musical festival at Columbia University. They were holding their closing session, when suddenly the assemblage was transfixed by a flood of music that poured forth from the open door of an ante-room near the room in which they sat. It was a woman's soprano voice, sweet, true and of unusual timbre and power. The song was "The Rosary."

At first they wondered whether they were not listening to the record of some grand opera singer, but they noticed the absence of all the attendant whirring of machinery that usually accompanies the phonographic reproduction of the human voice. They looked at each other in astonishment.

Who could it be?

In power the voice rivalled that of Mme. Schumann-Heink, in sweetness that of the famous Patti.

The song ended, and after a brief delay, the flawless voice burst into an aria from "I Pagliacci." Then, led by Gustav L. Becker, the president of the association, the music teachers rushed in a body in the direction from which the music came.

They found a crowd already gathered about the doorway of the ante-room. Within they saw a young man operating a phonograph, while another man stood nearby within the wondering circle and supported in his arms the limp form of a young girl all in white. Her eyes were closed and she trembled convulsively. She was the singer and she sang the difficult aria from "I Pagliacci" with a power that completely overwhelmed the notes of Caruso as his voice issued from the horn of the machine.

THE girl was Miss Marian Graham and the man who held her as she sang was Prof. Charles Munter. Breathlessly, the music teachers besought a solution of the mystery. They were told that Miss Graham could sing only when under hypnotic influence and they shook their heads dubiously.

Where, then, they asked, did she find that wonderful magnetic soprano?

Would they listen? They would.

The "Ave Maria" record was put on the talking machine. Miss Graham sang it lying limp in the arms of Professor Munter, swaying with him as she sang. The sextet from "Lucia" was put on. She caught up the soprano and poured it forth. The Schumann-Heink record followed, and her flawless notes outrivaled those of the great diva.

Once the pressing crowd on one side jostled the hypnotist. For a moment his attention was distracted. He turned aside. The girl's voice dropped to a hum, as though the medium of the phonograph had been half-lifted from the disk. Once it was lifted and the singing ceased abruptly.

Only when Professor Munter knew the words of the selection could she follow them, and she could sing the better when it was something with which he was most familiar. For it happens that Professor Munter is himself no musician. And Svengali was a master musician. That is why it is necessary to use the phonograph. It is needed to supplement his own powers. Otherwise his musical memory might fail him.

After several selections had been sung by the girl she was restored to consciousness. She was asked to sing "Home, Sweet Home," without the aid of the hypnotist.

The music teachers listened in awed surprise. The voice they heard was thin, piping, with no promise of a singer's future.

Apparently without the physical force and will of her Svengali and the sound suggestion of the talking machine, this Trilby was as helpless as that other, who falteringly rasped "Bon Bolt," amid a storm of jeers and hisses, as her master lay dead.

IT is due to Dr. Frank E. Miller, a prominent New York throat specialist, that this prototype of Du Maurier's heroine was discovered. Like many discoveries, it was due to an accident.

Miss Graham was recovering from an operation on the mastoid process, and as she suffered greatly from swollen glands, went to Dr. Miller for treatment. He advised the removal of her tonsils.

While they were talking she spoke of having heard other patients in his office singing the scales and otherwise testing their voices. Dr. Miller has many singers among his patients, and he suggested that it might have been some of these.

"I would give anything in the world if I could only sing, doctor," said Miss Graham. "It has been the ambition of my life to be a grand opera star. I feel that I've got it in me, and yet I cannot sing at all."

The doctor smiled.

"Let me hear you try," he said.

Her effort was lamentable. Worse, perhaps, than even that of the ill-fated Trilby. So the doctor shook his head sympathetically.

"I'm afraid I can't help you," he said. "It would take a Svengali to make you sing."

The doctor meant it in jest, but it gave Miss Graham an idea. It was no jest for her, because Professor Munter, whose secretary she was, had often treated her with hypnotic suggestion for her headaches.

PERHAPS he could teach her to sing. He was somewhat skeptical about it when she asked him, but agreed to make the effort. The result he obtained startled him. Here was a golden voice that came from apparently nowhere. It was certainly not Miss Graham's voice, and yet it came from her lips.

Dr. Miller was called in and was amazed to hear his whilom patient lifting a voice of marvelous power and beauty in difficult arias. He attended many demonstrations. He brought other doctors to hear her, throat specialists and psychologists. They were astounded. They could not explain it.

Here was a voice that, save for some slight faults of technique—and these would be overcome with training—rivalled the finest voices on the operatic stage today. Yet without her Svengali Miss Graham was completely helpless. She could not sing well enough to get a place in a country church choir.

But it was not this alone that struck Dr. Miller. If Miss Graham could be made to sing by the aid of a phonograph and a hypnotist, who was not a musician, what might not be accomplished by one who was a master of both subjects. It was this thought that led him to arrange the exhibition of Miss Graham's strange powers before the New York State Music Teachers' Association.

The possibilities that may lie in teaching singing by suggestion are tremendous. It was Dr. Miller's idea to put before the music teachers the thought that here was a branch of their endeavor which had barely been touched upon. The question was, how far could other teachers use suggestion in making singers out of pupils?

Would it ever be possible for this girl to sing without her Svengali?

This last is the question that is puzzling all the musical, medical and psychological savants. Many are of the opinion that if Miss Graham could once be made to sing, as she has shown she can sing when under hypnosis, she could be made to sing by auto-suggestion within three months.

And it must not be forgotten that Miss Graham has been all her life—at least up to a few weeks ago—a tuneless, voiceless, musicless girl.

IN an address on the subject of Miss Graham's strange gift before the Medical and Laryngological Society in New York City, Dr. Miller pointed out how unusual it was for any one to be able to sing with a phonograph. He emphasized the fact that the singers themselves cannot follow their own records as Miss Graham can follow them.

"It would seem," he said, in referring to the musical possibilities that her case has opened up, "from this singular and remarkable case that the hypnotic and suggestive power of the pedagogue might be given often enough to make her realize by automatism just the necessary organs in union between the psychology and physiology of voice teaching."

Whether this can ever be done successfully, of course, is problematical.

It may be that in the power that Professor Munter has over his secretary, and her voice in her hypnotized state there is some unknown element, some unique mental quantity that is not evident even to the student of psychology.

Again, she may contain in her throat—quiwertingly, of course—just the right combination of physical characteristics essential to produce a grand opera voice, but which requires the assistance of the hypnotist to bring them under proper control.

Or it may be that a host of genuine Trilbies may now arise and that our future prima donnas will owe their success, not to unending effort and hard work, but to some Svengali, who brings out the gold in their voices by auto-suggestion.

At least, the weird imagining of the novelist has become a fact.

ANECDOTES ABOUT REGULAR FOLK

MELVILLE E. STONE, general manager of the Associated Press, was sitting at his desk not long ago in his office in the Western Union Telegraph Company's building, Broadway and Dey street, New York, when a man whom he knew in other days was announced. It was one of the lazy days when Mr. Stone didn't feel quite himself. To tell the truth he had been taking an afternoon snooze when his quondam acquaintance came in.

The caller mentioned several things he had seen or read about. To each one Mr. Stone replied: "Yes, so I heard." The caller saw a little volume on the A. P. manager's desk and picked it up.

"That book is the work of a relative of mine," said Mr. Stone. "Ever heard of him?"

"Yes," was the reply of the caller. "I just heard that he is dead."

"What?" asked Mr. Stone, jumping from his chair. "Where did you hear that?"

"Read it in my morning paper as I was coming down here."

"Well, why didn't you tell me that when you came in?"

"I was coming to it, but as you had heard of everything I told you I thought I would work up to this gently, supposing that you had also heard of it, of course."

Mr. Stone quit his office hurriedly and his friend was left alone for what seemed an interminable time. Then a secretary came in and said that Mr. Stone had been called away unexpectedly by the news of the sudden death of a kinsman.

JOHN MARTIN, for several Presidential campaigns sergeant at arms of the Democratic National Convention, carries around with him about two hundred pounds of adipose, even when he is perspiring in a convention hall. Martin used to be a lawyer. His clients were for the most part such as had litigation about the Four Courts Building in St. Louis.

One Summer day when the courts were languishing and clients were scarce Martin and several attorneys of his class were cooling themselves on the shady side of the old building. Martin had taken off his hat, then he removed his shirt collar and finally he removed his shoes and socks.

That reminded him of the time when he was a boy. And then:

"I'll bet the drinks for the crowd that I can beat anybody in a foot race around the Four Courts block." The block included the Four Courts building and the county jail and city calaboose.

There were several takers. Each man skinned his shoes and socks and the reporters were made judges of the sprints. The mercury was nearly out of sight, as it generally is in St. Louis in Midsummer. Every runner was bareheaded. They had made about two-thirds of the distance when Martin saw that he was falling behind.

Encountering a policeman on the run he called to him to head off the front man. "He's got my watch," he puffed. The guardian of the law was fresh and was soon under way. He collared the man in front.

This gave Martin a chance to pass and he came out first. But it was declared a foul and Martin had to pay the bet.

LINCOLN STEFFENS, the writer, who gained some prominence in the McNamara trial in Los Angeles, is in Class A as an original speller. At least those who have read his copy so aver. One day he was in the company of Colonel Roosevelt. The Colonel was telling "Link" a story about Abraham Lincoln. "Link" was taking notes.

"By the way," asked "Link," interrupting, "how do you spell Abraham?"

"Do you mean how do I spell it or how did Lincoln spell it?" asked the Colonel.

"I mean what is the correct way?" said "Link."

"Well," replied the Colonel, "Lincoln spelled it as it is spelled in the Bible. But that was before Carnegie got out his speller. If I were you I would just write it Lincoln."

Then the Landlord Wilted.

"I have called to collect the rent," said the landlord briskly.

"Yes," said the lady of the house calmly. "Come in, please. Before I pay you, there are one or two things"

"One moment, madame," interrupted the landlord suavely. "Permit me to save you the trouble. I know the dining-room isn't fit for a dog to sit in, the wall-paper in the drawing-room is a downright shock to people of taste; the state of the kitchen is disgusting, and the front door a blot on the neighborhood. I also feel sure that you do not intend to remain unless I put fresh paper up in the bedroom and have the coal cellar thoroughly whitewashed. But I may say that I only mean to redo the drawing-room and paint the front gate this season."

The lady of the house bowed her head gently.

"That's really what we expected of you," she said quietly; "but I thought I would have to work off the same old bluff to get even that."

"The time will come," thundered a suffragist orator, "when women will get a man's wages!"

"Yes," sadly muttered a man on the rear seat, "next Saturday night!"

Wherein the Chief Star of the Big League Firmament, "Ty" Cobb, of the Detroit Tigers, Says His Say On Scientific Willow-Wielding. His Remarks Are Faithfully Set Down by William F. Whiston, Himself an Expert in Matters Pertaining to the Diamond, and Chosen by Cobb to Act as His Amanuensis in the Writing of This Article.

Tyrus Raymond Cobb.

"THREE cheers for Tyrus Raymond Cobb and President Taft!" was the way a Detroit fan once voiced his enthusiasm when America's premier ball player was introduced to the man who rules the nation. And while it was perhaps not in accordance with the rules that govern such occasions, that even the First Ball Player should take precedence over the First Citizen, at least it goes to show that in the minds of many the "Georgia Peach" comes first even where the President is concerned.

I found Cobb, on the last visit of the Detroit Tigers to New York, sitting in a hotel lobby, taking life easily. Apparently he didn't have a care in the world. But when I mentioned the object of my mission his face clouded a little. It seems he has been "stung" on more than one occasion by giving interviews to newspaper men that he didn't know well.

"I don't mind telling you anything I can," was the way the champion batsman started, "but the trouble is that if I tell you one thing it's a ten to one shot that when it appears in print it will be just the opposite to what I have said."

Having got this out of his system and being assured that he would be quoted accurately in every particular the idol of the Tiger fans went on:

"You see, I've got to be careful," he said. "Only a short time ago in Detroit when I was leaving the grounds after a game another player and I were discussing a decision that had been given. A writer for one of the local papers was behind us, and you can imagine my surprise when I read an article the next morning in which I was quoted as saying that the Detroit fans were a lot of knockers, or something to that effect. That is why I'm a bit chary of talking too freely nowadays.

"YOU want me to tell you something about the art of hitting safely? That's a pretty big field for discussion, and one that is open to considerable argument. Of course, it all depends on what team you're up against and what pitcher is in the box just how you'll make your calculations. And even then the best of us are apt to slip up sometimes.

"To be able to hit safely is obviously a ball player's best asset. If a man could be relied upon to get a hit every time he came to bat there would hardly be a limit to the salary he could command. As a matter of fact, a ball player takes his standing in the game almost entirely from his batting average, and a manager's first question when a player's name is mentioned is: 'What is he hitting?'

"There are some men in the game to-day, and others of the old school, who never had to learn how to hit. They were just natural born batters. Take men like McGraw of the Giants, Tinker of Chicago, Wagner of Pittsburg, Zimmerman of the Cubs, and a score of others; their records show that they were heavy hitters when they were playing in the minor leagues. Still, as good as they are, none is absolutely sure of a hit when he steps up to the plate.

"There never was a player in the game that some certain ball didn't bother. I am no exception. My advantage in this respect is that I know just the kind of a ball I can't hit to advantage and the average pitcher doesn't. Jackson, Cree, Lajoie, and even the great Wagner, have their troubles with certain pitchers, simply because they know the kind of a ball that bothers them. I don't profess to know what curve it is that causes their trouble; I only know the one that fezzes me.

"It has been my experience that fans like a game in which there is lots of hitting in preference to one which is played out on what is called 'inside baseball.' The hustle and bustle caused by a drive to the outfield, especially when there are men on bases, is what most men want to see. Of course, there are a great many fans who understand inside ball and like to see it played, but the 'hit and run' game is the more popular.

"IN order to be able to hold your own with the pitchers of to-day a player has to be on the job all the time. If you have any perceptible weakness at bat the pitcher or some of his teammates are almost certain to discover it.

"For instance, we will say that I couldn't hit an out drop which cut the corner of the plate. If the opposing pitcher was aware of that fact he would use that against me. Of course, a ball that will not go for a strike causes no one any trouble unless the batter misjudges it.

"There was a player with me on the Augusta team that would 'bite' nine times out of ten at an out curve which, if he allowed it to go by, would have been called a ball. He liked that kind of a ball, because when he did land on it it was certain to travel. There are lots of players in the big leagues that have the same failing. Not, perhaps, on the same curve, but they like a certain kind of a ball and can't resist the temptation to hit at it, even though they know the chances are against their connecting with it.

"The spitball when pitchers first learned to throw it caused the batters more trouble than any other. It was and is not only hard to hit, but there is no certainty about where it will go. It comes to you with a peculiar twist on it, and the chances are that a 'pop fly' is the best you will do with it. A slow ball also often catches a batter off his guard. Being used to striking quickly and hard you find when it is too late to recover that the ball has not reached you.

"Left-handed batters have a slight advantage over others as they are able to hit to right field much easier. With men on bases a right field hit has the most value, because it reduces the chances of a double play. The batter who advances a runner, even though he is put out, is entitled to much credit.

"You see, the man on base has got to depend on the men who follow him to take him around. Of course, you can steal a base once in awhile, but the steal from third to home is not accomplished often enough to become common.

"I DON'T know of any two men in the big leagues who handle themselves alike when at bat. Some hold the bat at the same angle, but face the pitcher differently. Others use the full swing, while some get the best results from 'pushing' the bat into the ball. There is no set rule for a man to follow. Results are what count, and the methods of securing them are a secondary consideration.

"There are any number of players and fans alike who disapprove of the manner in which I hold my bat, and also the way I stand at the plate. Still, while I have obtained fairly good results others have accomplished just as much by using an entirely different style.

"It is poor policy for any batter to consider any pitcher as 'easy.' One game you may get three or four hits off a particular man, and the next time you face him he'll strike you out. The topnotchers often get knocked out of the box in an inning or two, and by a team whose players are not considered out of the ordinary. On the other hand, you often see a pitcher not looked upon as dangerous shut out the hardest hitting team in the league.

"It would be unfair to both to try and compare the old-timers to the present-day batters, because the conditions under which the game is now played are so different. I suppose a pitcher had a little more advantage over the batter in the old days, when the box was closer to the plate, but, on the other hand, look what the man at bat gained by being able to call for the kind of a ball he wanted.

"If the latter scheme were in vogue to-day what do you suppose the present-day bunch would do to most pitchers? What chance would the man in the box have if he were forced by the rules to pitch the kind of a ball I was known to hit nine times out of ten? Personally, I think that such men as Anson, Spaulding, Dalehanty, Brouthers, Irwin, Kelly and others of the old-timers would be just as successful under present conditions as they were in the early days of the game.

"LOOK at the record made by Willie Keeler which stood so long. It is fifteen years since he accumulated 243 hits as a season's work, and it was not until last year that it was surpassed. In 1911 I secured 247—just four more than Keeler.

"I was always able to judge a ball quickly, and to this and the coaching I received when I first got into fast company I attribute my success as a hitter. When I started playing ball—in 1904 with the Anniston team of the Alabama and Tennessee League—I batted .370, and in thirty-seven games, the same year, with the Augusta team of the Southern Atlantic League, I had an average of .237. My first full season in fast company was in 1905 with the same team. I played in 103 games and hit at a .326 clip, fielding my position with an average of .927.

"Detroit bought me during the latter part of that season, and I played forty-one games with them. In 1906 my average was .320, in 1907 I added thirty points, and dropped back to .324 in 1908. Since 1909 I have increased my average every year, until last season I finished with an average of .420.

"I have often been asked to express an opinion relative to the abilities of the men in the National League as against the American from a batting standpoint, but inasmuch as I have never played in the former league and know little or nothing about its pitchers, except by reputation, I have refrained from doing so. There is no doubt in my mind that the American League pitchers are every bit as fast as the others, but, on the other hand, I don't doubt for a moment that the hitters who are making a reputation in the National would be able to do the same in Ban Johnson's organization.

"THERE is no school that better fits a man to become a good hitter than going up against the best of them in a regular game. No matter how hard and how long you practice, you're got to bat against fast pitchers before you can know what you can do.

"When you see a pitcher working with his teammates just before a game you have noticed, no doubt, that nearly every man drives the ball to the outfield. The reason for that is that the pitcher is throwing just the kind of a ball the batter likes.

"When I first joined the Detroit team I was considered a fair hitter, but I soon found that I had lots to learn. Driving the ball to any particular part of the diamond is the most difficult thing for a player to attempt. In fact, there are comparatively few men who can successfully turn this trick with any frequency.

"You see, a pitcher is bound to have a good idea what the batter is going to try for, and, of course, he's going to throw a ball if he can that will make it almost impossible for him to follow out his plans. Now and then he slips up in his calculations or makes a mistake in his delivery, but not often, and it is only the exceptional batter that can place a hit if the pitcher succeeds in throwing the ball he wishes. Even then he fails more often than not.

"So, you see, the science of hitting safely becomes an equation in which the pitcher is always the unknown quantity. The batsman should study his own weaknesses and strive to overcome them.

"Then if he has a quick eye and an ability to gauge the man he is facing on the mound he will find that he is beginning to average well in the hit column; that is, if the pitchers he meets do not outgeneral him."

THE BLUFF FAMILY

By MAUDE PINGREE

"DEDICATED to Billy Mack," read Flossie Bluff from a typewritten sheet in her hand. "The Life-saver of the Bluff Family—our hot-touch darling." Lost in poetic abstraction, she sailed through the room, pretending she thought she was alone. As the other members of the Bluff family, assembled in solemn council, were sitting conspicuously around on the near-antiques the attempt at illusion was exceedingly punk. Besides, a self-conscious air, born of knowing she was doing something naughty, buttered her all over.

"Dedicated to Billy Mack, noble benefactor of the Bluffs," chanted the poet with an isolated air. "Penned by the budding bard of the family above mentioned, whose genius is not appreciated by the vulgar editorial mob."

"Being inscribed in the spirit of tender sympathy, I hope to goodness it doesn't make anybody mad."

This last sentence was shot directly at the place her father sat.

"Ballad of the Broke!" she announced in a monotone:

"Aw, wouldn't you lend me a dollar or two?
Twould mean much to me and nothin' to you!
Aw, wouldn't you lend me a dollar or two?
You would, if you knew, if only you knew!
How the gas man is swearing on the threshold alone!
How the ice man is slamming the dumbwaiter door!
How the grocer is blazing away on the phone!
How the landlord isn't polite any more!
Aw, wouldn't you lend me a dollar or two?
You would, if you knew, if only you knew!
How the butcher is camping day and night on my trail!
How the baker is making a noise like a hearse!
How the milk man is worrying me thin as a rail!
How collectors—great shakes! won't you hark to my verse?
Aw, wouldn't you lend me a dollar or two?
'Twould mean much to me and nothin' to you.
Aw, wouldn't you lend me a dollar or two?
You would, if you knew, if only you knew!
How my credit has shrunk to a pitiful size!
And a few paltry plunks let me rest for awhile!
How tired I am of the time-frayed old lies!
Aw, won't you dig down in your big, shiny pile?"

AN artless awakening to the presence of the others finished Flossie's little comedy.

"I thought it would be nice and save loads of brain fag," she explained extravagantly, "to have a form—like they have in business offices—perfectly frank and straightforward—in which to request loans from Billy Mack."

Suddenly her father's stern expression caught her eye.

"You don't like my idea, do you, daddy, dear? It's only until your big deals pan out, you know," she concluded weakly.

It must be made perfectly clear that any reference to the indirect methods with which the Bluff family covered its immediate needs was strictly tabooed. It is easy to see that observations of that kind might impugn the business acumen of the head of the household, the honesty of whose intentions, to clear up all such obligations with the surplusage of the next day's enormous profits, could not be questioned.

Therefore making obvious these very temporal procedures was indelicate, inconsiderate and unflattering.

These traditions of the Bluff family rendered the recital of the above poem on such a sensitive theme the most reckless stunt Flossie had ever dared essay in the presence of her father.

Algernon's veiled eyes were shining with glee, but a diplomatic deafness afflicted him at opportune moments characteristically. He acted as if he hadn't been present. Besides, any brother's appreciation of her cleverness is likely to develop a sister's vanity and spoil her. Everybody knows that.

Mrs. Bluff's apprehensive glance questioned the effect this lyrical exposition of their earthly troubles would have upon her husband.

A SMILE, much damaged around the edges, twisted the mustache of the gentleman himself.

"My dear daughter," he began, visibly establishing his dignity. The others held their breath to listen.

"My dear daughter, you have harrowed my feelings very deeply. I'm afraid you don't understand the principles of your father concerning the habit of borrowing."

"Oh, dad, it was only in fun. I didn't mean to hurt your feelings. But don't you really think it's a scream, the way you're always able to persuade Billy Mack to turn over his money to you, and for such a funny reason? Poor thing, he just can't help himself—he simply has to dig down when you ask for a loan. You've got him where the hair is short."

A severe look from her father slid merrily off Flossie, who knew she was in for it now and ached to clear her system of what she'd always thought about the "Billy Mack" habit in the Bluff family. This was her opportunity.

"You know very well," defended Mr. Bluff, "that Billy Mack ought to be more than glad to do what he can for us. I saved"

"Oh, yes, dad, I know you saved Billy Mack from drowning a million years or so ago—that's what makes it so funny."

Apparently oblivious to the interruption, Mr. Bluff steamed on:

"I saved Billy Mack from drowning at the risk of my own life. He's a very wealthy man now, and gratitude"

"But, father, haven't people the right of choice about how they shall show their gratitude?"

"Gratitude should make him ready to serve me in the way I need the most," wound up the Bluff pater familias, unheeding.

BUT his daughter was still hot on the scent.

"That happened years and years ago, didn't it, and how long is the obligation to last?" she asked, with a cruel little twinkle.

Mr. Bluff began to fidget. He braced himself to meet the situation with indulgence.

"Yes, my dear; but you do not understand. Billy Mack knows very well that those years have embarrassed me only temporarily. I am not begging. I shall pay him back with big interest—bigger than he could get elsewhere."

Flossie sighed in desperation.

"Don't you see you're taking advantage of him—that you're giving him no choice?"

"Still, he wouldn't be here on earth to help anyone if it wasn't for me," was the dogged reply. "Wouldn't he be an ingrate to refuse any little financial aid I may need after I'd bestowed upon him the supreme favor of all—his life?"

"But that isn't the point, daddy. Don't you see that you're holding a mortgage on his life for having saved it, and compelling his gratitude to pay interest every minute or two. I should think he'd be crazy and wish you'd let him sink into a watery grave. I should—so, there!"

The girl's words sent a blush of anger flying across Mr. Bluff's face.

"If you know so much about how to do things you should be invaluable in solving the problem we were just now discussing, when your silly poem interrupted us," he said, sarcastically. "Your brother must be back at college to-day. My idea for the bettering of the X Construction Company wasn't taken up as soon as I expected. Therefore we have no money to get him back to New Haven. There is no one on earth to whom we can turn in this crisis but Billy Mack. Gratitude should"——

"BUT why do you insist upon gratitude? Can't you——

"Oh, I say, let up on dad," implored Algernon, who loved peace, even when there was no peace. "You don't know anything at all, Floss. Hang it! There's hardly a man in New York who could do business if he didn't borrow every minute or two. Dad's all to the mustard, even if he is no J. Pierpont. What do you want, anyway?"

The boy turned to his father.

"Go ahead! 'Phone to Billy Mack, dad. He'll let us have the kale. I've just got to get to New Haven to-night."

Mr. Bluff went to the phone. In a moment he returned. His face was pale and full of pain.

"Billy Mack has just sailed for Europe, to be gone for an indefinite period," he whispered, weakly sinking into a chair.

His wife hastened to his side.

"Jumping Jupiter!" exclaimed Algernon. "What in thunder am I going to do?"

"Why, 'Billy Mack' it somewhere else, of course," cried Flossie, optimistically.

'Billy Mack' it.
If you want to get some honey, Bub,
Why lack it?
Don't be an awful dub!
'Billy Mack' it."

She was still improvising as the rest of the Bluffs filed funereally out of the room.

"The absence of Billy Mack certainly does change the aspect of things for the Bluff family," she mused soberly to herself, when she was left alone.

His Singing Voice.

Business had detained the master of the house. Strictly speaking, it was 3 o'clock in the morning as he softly crept up the stairs, and everything was calm and peaceful.

Carefully and noiselessly he opened the door of his bedroom and crossed the threshold with the grace of an Indian on the trail.

Unfortunately, however, the family cat was enjoying a well earned rest on the rug by the bedside, and the master of the house elected, under a misapprehension, to deposit the weight of his foot upon the feline's caudal appendage.

Naturally the feline uttered a shrill and noisome complaint, piercing sounds that awakened the mistress of the house. This good lady sat up in bed, perturbed, but not at a loss.

"Frederic," she murmured, "don't you think it's a trifle late to be singing? The neighbors might complain, you know!"

"Lucy, dear, if I should attempt to spell 'Cupid' why should I be prevented from getting beyond the first syllable?"

Lucy gave it up, whereupon William said:

"Because, when I come to 'C-u,' of course, I cannot go farther."

Lucy then said she thought that was the nicest conundrum she had ever heard.

A very fat man who had just retired from the grocery trade was one day met in the street by a friend. The friend, wishing to chaff him, said:

"You are failing since you retired from business; you are so thin I hardly know you."

"Probably I am," replied the ex-grocer. "I certainly don't weigh so much as I did while in the grocery business."

The WRECK of the HIBERNIA

A FACT STORY UNPARALLELED IN THE HISTORY OF THE SEA

BY MERRITT CRAWFORD.

Lieut. O. J. P. Lee, R. N. R., second officer of the Denis, who rescued the starving crew of the Nova Scotia schooner Hibernia. The Humane Society of Liverpool, England, have presented him a specially struck medal for his heroism, in daring the dangers of a hurricane swept sea to aid the dying mariners, and the Canadian Government is planning to do likewise.

Copyright, 1912, by Continental Newspaper Syndicate.

When the Rescuers Came.

TWENTY-NINE days adrift in the mid-Atlantic on the bows of a battered and dismasted hulk, most of that time with no food save turnips to eat and part of it without any, their only drink the scanty drops of rain they could catch in a piece of sailcloth, while gale after gale swept mountains of sea water over their precarious refuge, thrice passed by ships that might have relieved their dangerous situation, only to be saved at last as they were falling into the stupor that precedes death by starvation. This is the remarkable experience, unparalleled in recent annals of the sea, of Captain Charles McDade and his crew of six men on the Nova Scotia lumber schooner, Hibernia. And the daily columns of the newspapers never have had the story.

That the famished, storm-worn seamen were saved at all was due alone to the bravery and determination of Captain McDade, who compelled a constant watch to be kept in the face of the incipient mutiny of his desperate and despairing men, and to the heroism of Second Officer O. J. P. Lee of the Booth liner Denis and seven of his crew, who dared the dangers of a tempest-lashed sea in an open boat to rescue the unfortunate mariners.

Stripped of all unnecessary verbiage the story in all its bald details as lately told to a committee of inquiry appointed by the Canadian government outrivals in dramatic intensity anything ever told in fiction. It is a tale of hardship and heroism running over the whole gamut of human emotions that has rarely been equaled in real life.

Fourteen days before the Hibernia's men were picked up by the Denis another British steamer stood by them all of one night, leaving the starving men to their fate and continuing on its course only after several unsuccessful attempts had been made by a lifeboat crew to reach the wreck. It is to fix the responsibility for this inhuman act that the authorities at Ottawa have undertaken the present investigation. If after considering all the facts the captain of this steamer is found to have been negligent of his duty in any degree the Canadian government will present an official memorandum of their committee's findings to the Board of Merchant Marine of the British Admiralty, who will then take action. The results will probably not be very pleasant for that captain, whose name and ship the Canadian officials at this time refuse to disclose.

WHAT the feelings of the imprisoned men must have been, clinging with desperately insecure hand holds to the wet and slippery deck of their ship, as they saw this vessel, apparently their last hope of rescue, steam away into the sunrise needs no description. They were far out of the course of all transatlantic craft, and as far as they knew there remained to them only the single chance in a thousand that some sailing ship might sight them and heed their signals of distress.

And between the seven of them and the gaunt and fearful specter Starvation were five half-pound tins of salmon and less than half a hundred weight of raw turnips. Seven men and a cat, for the ship's pet crouched and clung and starved with her storm-tossed masters—and the black smoke dying away to the eastward the passing of their only hope.

Before that time the men and cabby had been messmates. Afterward the cat shifted for itself, save for the little the captain and his mate spared on alternate days from their own scanty rations. But the cat could sleep. The men couldn't, except in struggling snatches. When the wolfishness of its first hunger passed the animal slept the long hours away wrapped in the captain's overcoat.

The men envied the cat at first, then looked at its lean sides hungrily. Later they might have looked so at each other. But help came in time, and the iron hand and will of the captain stood between.

A splendid, upstanding man is Captain McDade. Big of muscle, clear of eye and crisp of speech as the salt sea he loves, he stands a clean six feet five in his stockings, a very viking, one of those mighty men of the North who can rightfully claim kinship with Wodin and Thor. But for him and the power of him this story might never have been written, or if it had, only as a tale of dead men on a drifting derelict.

Just twice during all his testimony did the captain show any emotion. Once was when he told of a farewell letter he had written to his wife on the day before he and his men were rescued. He had written and sealed it in a bottle, in the hope that some day it might be picked up and at least she might learn how he died, at a time when he knew that before another forty-eight hours he and his mate and the steward might be fighting for their lives with the four Barbadian negroes that constituted the rest of the crew. He had written it while these gaunt men, racked with hunger and parched with thirst, eyed him suspiciously, uncertain that perhaps he had somewhere concealed a secret supply of precious food and drink.

THE other occasion when the big sailorman showed that beneath his bluffness dwelt a spirit strangely gentle to weaker things came as he related the incidents of the rescue. His voice rasped as he told how in the excitement of leaping from the Hibernia's slippery deck into the lifeboat he had forgotten to save the animal with which he had sometimes shared his meager allowance of food. It still slept, wrapped in his overcoat in the only dry part of the waterlogged ship when the rescuers came.

He told how he wanted to go back, for he had meant to take the cat over the side with him had there been time, but Officer Lee of the Denis pointed to the seas that momentarily threatened to sweep over them, drowning rescued and rescuers together.

"And I lost my nerve," testified McDade, as if making a shameful confession. "I was afraid to go back. I knew that the cat could live but a few hours longer, anyway—she was naught but a handful of bones, though we'd have eaten her next day, if the Denis hadn't sighted us—and I could not ask those who had dared so come for us to take the risk." So spoke the man.

Others told how the captain had broken down and wept like a child when the lifeboat did not put back. Not alone was it because he had left the cat to its fate, but because the strong man's spirit within him was so weakened that he dared not return. And the memory of this was with him as he testified.

The real story of the voyage of the ill-fated Hibernia does not begin until she had been nearly a month out of her home port. Leaving Windsor, Nova Scotia, on December 9, 1911, with a cargo of lumber for Barbadoes, the schooner met with no serious storms save such as her skipper was accustomed to expect at that season of the year, until December 20, when the hurricane that dismasted and wrecked her was encountered.

Besides Captain McDade, the Hibernia's crew consisted of the mate, Charles Backhouse, of Hantsport, Nova Scotia; George E. Parsons, of Medford, Nova Scotia, steward, and four Barbadan negroes, seamen. The mate, Backhouse, was making his first voyage in thirteen years, by his physician's advice, leaving his wife and five children to conduct his fertile farm during his absence.

LIKE most lumber carrying craft that clear from Maine and Nova Scotia ports, the Hibernia was overloaded. Her deck was piled ten feet high with Canadian spruce and maple, and when her masts splintered under the rush of the hurricane, the strain of their leaning, added to the shifting weight of her deck cargo, split the vessel from stern to foremast. Only the lumber in her hold thereafter kept her afloat, her forward deck alone being clear of the waves. And there her crew took refuge.

The schooner's dinghy, wrenched from its davits at the stern, was swept away, and lost, while six of the seven barrels of fresh water that were lashed on the deck were also washed overboard. Fortunately, the members of the crew were able to save considerable provisions from the cook's galley before it was engulfed in the waves and for a few days after the abatement of the hurricane, as they became assured the Hibernia was not going to sink at once, they suffered few hardships.

Captain McDade and the mate doled out the rations sparingly, however, for none knew better how long it might be before they would be picked up. Watches were arranged and a flare rigged for use at night, made of a half gallon tin can fastened to the end of a twelve foot steering sweep in which oil-soaked rags were burned.

Early on the fourth day after the hurricane, the mate, whose watch it was, sighted another schooner far to the leeward, sailing close hauled under double reefs. For an hour or two she remained in sight while the Hibernia's crew made every effort to attract her attention without success. A stiff gale was blowing at the time, the sea was very rough, and this, coupled with their lowness in the water, probably prevented their distress signals being observed by the other craft. It was their first disappointment.

Others were soon to follow. The gale that had beset them during the days that followed the hurricane, on the seventh day increased in fury and for four days the crew had to lash themselves to the deck to prevent being washed overboard. During that period, as they drifted at the mercy of the tempest, their improvised cooking galley was torn from its lashings, and their single cask of fresh water and most of the provisions that remained were swept away. Only a few half pound cans of salmon and part of a hundred weight bag of raw turnips remained.

THE morning of the twelfth day dawned with some abatement of the storm and Captain McDade ordered a further reduction of the already scanty allowance of food. It was impossible to start a fire and the men stood about the deck shivering in their sodden clothes as they listened to the captain's edict.

"One half pound can of salmon for seven of us and a raw turnip apiece."

That was to be the daily ration while the food lasted, or until they were rescued. The Barbadan negroes grumbled, but assented. Little had been eaten by anyone during the blow and all were ravenous. Another day might deprive them even of the scant store of food they had and besides they might be picked up soon. Why not eat? It would do them no good if the ocean took it, as it had taken the rest.

But McDade was in command and his order remained the law of the Hibernia, even if two-thirds of her were under water. So the Barbadans sulked, but took their meager share of the salmon and the turnips with no open rebellion. There was trouble in the late afternoon, however, for another schooner was sighted, that apparently observed their distress signals, changing her course and bearing toward them. For a time their hopes rose, and when dusk descended with the vessel still heading in their direction, it was with difficulty that McDade restrained his men from making a raid on the stores.

The flare was lighted and all night the famished men waited for their rescuers to come. Nearer and nearer they saw the boat's mast head light approach and then, as the schooner went about on another tack, saw it slowly vanish beyond their ken. In the morning no sail showed on the horizon. They looked at each other with drawn, wolfish faces and gathered together to watch Captain McDade divide the daily allowance of food.

Morning brought rain and with it some relief, for already the sufferings of thirst had been added to famine. In the afternoon the gale again increased, though not with sufficient force to make it necessary for the marooned men to lash themselves to the deck as before. But in the night an event occurred that gave McDade a foretaste of what the future held for them unless speedily rescued.

Two of the powerful negroes, half mad with hunger, made an onslaught on the crew's slender store of provisions, gorging themselves on the salmon that remained. Only the strong hand of the captain stopped them there, for McDade awakening, and seeing the flame of the distress flare grown dim, rose to investigate.

With one of his mates, the negro on watch was ravenously feeding. As a wild animal feeds the two fed —as a beast that has fasted long—furtively, fiercely, fearfully. McDade felled both, each with a single blow from his knotted fist and the men fled trembling before his wrath. They were cowed, but they had eaten, and the wild beast of hunger within them was stilled. Nor so easily might they have retreated had he discovered them sooner.

AFTER that the white men stood watch, turn and turn about. In future there should be no more thefts of food. In the morning McDade laid down the law of the sea to the negro seamen, which is also the law of human nature—man's primal right to self-preservation. His methods were as simple as the minds he wished to impress. The lives of all hung in the balance, and he who transgressed the law invited his own destruction. And McDade showed the only revolver among the seven of them.

But the harm had been done. In half an hour the two negroes had eaten what might have been sufficient, if carefully doled out, to keep all of them alive for a week. McDade grimly told them that they had written their own death warrants, unless help came speedily.

"You have eaten our share and yours!" he said. "And when the worst comes you shall go first." But he did not keep his word. Share and share alike, black and white, the remaining food was divided to the end.

Toward evening the storm increased, but the flare was kept alight and when Backhouse, the mate, whose watch it was, near midnight sighted a steamer's lights, there was a rush to the port rail. Hurriedly fresh rags were steeped in oil and the flare replenished until it blazed aloft. Soon they saw the steamer's port and starboard lights show as she shifted her course and came toward them. Nearer and nearer she came, until, when perhaps an eighth of a mile away from the Hibernia, her screws ceased revolving and she swept forward, coming to a stop about six hundred yards to leeward of the wreck. She had seen their distress flare and was standing by.

McDade and his men gave a feeble cheer. Help had come to them in the time of their urgent need. Hour by hour they waited patiently through the night for the rescuers, while the yellow lights of the steamer glowed warmly across the black waters that lay between. Hour by hour they waited hopefully. Perhaps the captain hesitated to lower a boat in the darkness, as the storm was steadily increasing in strength. But in the morning

The boat would come, for was not the steamer standing by? Yet in the gray dawn, while the wares rolled mountain high, they heard the steamer's screws again begin to revolve, saw dangling in its out-swung davits the boat they had waited for so hopefully, the white faces of wonderingly curious passengers peering across the drifting spray, and the hope in their hearts died.

McDade watched the steamer's white track across the wind-driven waters until she became a black speck to the eastward. Then he turned to his mate and the steward standing beside him.

"What will be will be!" he said. "But I should rather be me as I am than the captain of that ship."

And he counted out the day's rations a turnip to each.

THE fourteen days that followed are a piece, one with another. A series of nightmares that McDade nor his mates can tell of now without a shudder. How the one turnip a day became no turnip a day. How the negroes, with less stamina than their white companions, one by one succumbed to weakness, lying on the deck indifferent to their fate. How McDade and Backhouse and the steward, Parsons, kept watch and watch, burning their clothes at the end to keep ablaze the flare, till finally the last two gave up. All this is a story that will never be told in detail.

But early in the morning of the fourteenth day thereafter, while his stupefied crew lay around him awaiting the death that each hoped would bring him relief, it was McDade, man of blood and iron, weakly swaying back and forth the flare, that saw the lights of another steamer—the Denis. Much as the former ship had done, she stopped in her course, but this time a boat was lowered and fought its way through the piled-up seas to within hail of the wreck.

"Aboard there!" called the officer in charge through the darkness.

"Aye," said McDade, "all here—but starving."

With difficulty he forced his weakened men to the rail by threat and blow, rousing them out of their lethargy, and when one by one all had safely fallen—no other term describes it—into the lifeboat swiftly driven past the Hibernia's bow, McDade sprang after them.

With the rest he sank limply into the bottom of the rescuer's craft. Then he remembered that of them all he had forgotten one. He raised himself to the thwart and looked toward the dying flare that marked where all that was left of the Hibernia was drifting.

"The cat," he said feebly. "I meant to bring her."

"And you would go back?" queried the rescuing officer. "Look at that sea, man!"

The boat rose like a speckle on the crest of an angry wave. Before them a thousand yards away beckoned the lights of the Denis. Behind them faded the flare that marked the vessel they had left.

McDade slipped backward from the thwart weakly.

"No, no," he said. "I dare not."

And he wept at the shame of it.

The Liverpool Humane Society has given Officer Lee of the rescuing crew a silver medal for bravery, and the Canadian government is planning to do likewise. Backhouse is back with his wife again, and the other members of the Hibernia's crew have gone to their various homes or have shipped elsewhere.

But unless some thoughtful captain has seen and scuttled her, or old ocean has called her for its own, somewhere in the South Atlantic a derelict is drifting. And in the only sheltered place on her bow, wrapped in a well-worn overcoat, is a man's farewell letter to his wife and the skeleton of the only member of the Hibernia's crew who was not saved.

And these two Captain Charles McDade, though he live to be a hundred, will never forget.

A story is told of a well-known divine who was visiting a prison, when he came across a prisoner whose features were familiar to him.

"What brought you here, my poor fellow?" he asked.

"You married me to a woman a little while ago, sir," the prisoner replied with a sigh.

"Ah, I see," said the parson. "And she was domineering and extravagant, and she drove you to desperate courses, eh?"

"No," said the prisoner; "my old woman turned up."

+ + + +

"Oh, papa," she said, with a blush, "young Mr. Chestnut, who owns so many coal mines in the Midlands, is coming again this evening, and he says he wants to see you on some important business."

"All right, my dear," responded the old man, chucking her playfully under the chin. "I know what the young man wants."

That evening Mr. Chestnut came to the point at once. "Mr. Hendricks," he said, boldly, "I want to ask you if you have laid in a stock of coal."

+ + + +

It was during one of the recent strikes. An old man, evidently a striker, who looked rather seedy and down at the heel, went up to a trio of young strikers who were standing at the corner of the street, and asked if one of them could lend him a match. One of the young men, thinking he would have a joke at the old man's expense, handed him a match, and with a serious face said to him:

"But when will I get it back?"

"After the strike," was the quick though unexpected reply.

PARK LAWN ADDITION

One of the most sightly additions to Colorado Springs. Eight square blocks of ground extending from Columbia to Fontanero street and from El Paso to Prospect street. Streets 100 feet wide. To the east it overlooks the turfed course of the Colorado Springs Golf club, a park of 200 acres.

To the north, south and west an uninterrupted view of the mountains bluffs and foothills, high and dry, and good soil for gardening. Gas, electricity water and sewer connections. Steele school within a few minutes' walk. Restrictions insure permanent attractiveness of section for better class of homes.

EMMA M'CHESNEY ADVISES HER SON TO GO TO COLLEGE

In the American Magazine, Edna Ferber writes another Emma McChesney story. Emma McChesney is a successful traveling saleswoman, attractive, about 40 years old, and possessing a high-spirited son, 18 years old, who is something of a problem to her. On the subject of a college education Emma McChesney lays down the following advice to her son:

"Jock, you're going to college. No—wait a minute. You'll have a chance to prove the things you just said by getting through in three years instead of the usual four. If you're in earnest you can do it. I want my boy to start in to this business war equipped with every means of defense. You called it a game. It's more than that—it's a battle. Compared to the successful business man of today the Revolutionary Minute men were as keen and alert as the Seven Sleepers. I know that there are more noncollege men driving street cars than there are college men. But that doesn't influence me. You could get a job now. Not much of a position, perhaps, but something self-respecting and fairly well-paying. It would teach you many things. You might get a knowledge of human nature that no college could give you. But there's something—poise—self-confidence — assurance — that nothing but college can give you. You will find yourself in those three years. After you finish college you'll have difficulty in fitting into your proper niche, perhaps, and you'll want to curse the day on which you heeded my advice. It'll look as though you had simply wasted those three precious years. But in five or six years after, when your character has jelled, and you've hit your pace, you'll bless me for it. As for a knowledge of humanity and of business tricks—

Well, your mother is fairly familiar with the busy marts of trade. If you want to learn folks you can spend your summers selling Featherlooms with me.

"After all, remember you're only 18. You'll probably spend part of your time rushing around at class proms with a red ribbon in your coat lapel to show you're on the floor committee. And you'll be girl-fussing too. But you'd be attracted to girls, in or out of college, and I'd rather, just now, that it would be some pretty, nice-thinking college girl in a white sweater and a blue serge skirt, whose worst thought was wondering if you could be cajoled into taking her to the Freshman-Sophomore basketball game, than some red-lipped black-jet-earringed siren gazing at you across the table in some basement cafe. And, goodness knows, Jock, you wear your clothes so beautifully that even the haberdashers' salesmen eye you with respect. I've seen 'em. That's one course you needn't take in college."

NEW YORK MARKET

NEW YORK, Aug. 10.—The buying movement that followed yesterday's late rise was resumed with vigor today. Advances were rather less substantial, however, in the more important crop carriers or grangers than in other issues of less importance.

As the brief session progressed, Reading reached its highest quotation on the present movement, and Norfolk & Western scored its record price, with some inquiry for New York Central and New Haven at steady gains. Activity in the latter was an unusual feature, the more so now, when pending federal legislation would debar its ships with those of the Southern Pacific and other railroads from Panama canal privileges.

United States Steel, coppers and various other industrials were decidedly backward in the movement, which was the more significant because of the strength of the railway list.

In the final hour, the rise underwent a slight reversal, consequent on realizing sales, and trading became dull, but final prices in numerous instances were at or near the best.

Steel "unfilled tonnage" figures for July were issued at the close of the day and totaled 5,957,089 tons, which more than met popular expectations and exceeded all previous records.

Actual bank loans increased by less than $1,000,000, with a cash gain of $1,844,000, making a slight gain in reserves.

The bond market was steady. Total sales, par value, $1,910,000.

CHICAGO MARKET

CHICAGO, Aug. 10.—Predictions that next month's figures on the yield on spring wheat would run fully two bushels an acre above the present Washington estimate had a depressing influence today. The market, although steady at the close, was down ⅝@½ to ⅝c net. It was asserted in some quarters that the government total for the spring wheat crop should have been heavier by 40,000,000 to 50,000,000 bushels. The entire yield, including that from the winter wheat states, was, therefore, held to promise well above 700,000,000 bushels, especially as the federal figures for Kansas were alleged to be less authentic than the state report. There was such general covering by week-end shorts, however, and so decided support from private wire concerns when the market touched low levels that prices in the end showed a fair rally. December ranged from 91¾ to 92¼c, with last sales ⅝@¾c net lower at 92@⅛.

Stubborn support for cash corn and for the September option seemed to call a halt on bearishness regarding later months. Besides the chance of accidents to the growing crops induced shorts to cover on all good-sized dips. December fluctuated between 54⅛@54¾c, closing steady at 54⅝c, a loss of ⅝c from last night. No. 2 yellow was quoted at 76½@77c.

Receipts of oats here this week turned out to be 2,000,000 bushels more than shipments. There was influential buying, though, after the market had declined. Outside limits touched for December were 31⅞@32⅜c with the close ⅛c down, at 32¼@⅜c.

Provision trade was light. Prices swayed down and then up with grain. In the end the market averaged about 5c advance compared with 24 hours before.

REVIEW OF STATEMENT CLEARING HOUSE BANKS

NEW YORK, Aug. 10.—The Financier will say:

The statement of the New York clearing house banks for the week was decidedly favorable, although the changes in the various times were not strikingly important. Chief interest centered around the report of cash changes, and the exhibit based on actual conditions showed that the banks had gained $1,844,000 in cash, which was slightly less than had been anticipated. There was a small increase of $955,000 in loans, while net deposits rose $3,894,000. The latter increase called for additional reserve requirements, but the amount was not heavy enough to wipe out the effect of cash gain, and the clearing institutions increased their cash reserve by $889,300, making the price 25 per cent, minimum $20,788,250.

The statement worked out on the system of averages was even more favorable, excess reserve standing at $24,436,000.

The assurance of bumper crops everywhere make it certain that the demands on New York banks this fall for funds will be heavier than usual.

GREAT ALASKAN EARTHQUAKE

Account Published by United States Geological Survey of the Quake at Yakutat Bay—One of the Ten Greatest Earthquakes in History

The United States geological survey has just published an account of one of the ten greatest earthquakes of historic times—that in the Kakutat Bay region of Alaska. Although there is no especial relation between earthquakes and volcanic eruptions, the recently reported earthquake at Fairbanks as well as the activity among Alaskan volcanoes gives perhaps added interest to this account of a natural phenomenon of another class.

The Yakutat Bay earthquake occurred on September 3, 1899, and was followed during the next three weeks by many less violent shocks. The area of greatest intensity lay along the flanks of the St. Elias range, in a region of high mountains and superb glaciers, and the movement was accompanied by enormous avalanches and rock slides. This is a vivid demonstration that the growth of mountains is still in progress. At some places in the region the land subsided and forests were submerged. At most places, however, the land rose, and many points which before had lain below sea level were elevated above it. Barnacles, which had lived in sea water were found 47 feet above sea level. The study of the effects of this earth movement was undertaken by the late Ralph S. Tarr of Cornell university, and Lawrence Martin of the University of Wisconsin, and their report of the work has just been published as Professional Paper 69 of the United States geological survey, with a preface by G. K. Gilbert.

In addition to making an exhaustive study of the movement of the land which took place in the Yakutat Bay region and of the effects of the earthquake upon the many glaciers of the region, the writers amassed a great fund of information in regard to the intensity of the quake throughout the whole area within which it was sensible and recorded the testimony of many witnesses. The shock was felt at distances of 670 and 1,200 miles in opposite directions from Yakutat Bay, and the area of the region over which the tremblings were felt is more than 1,500,000 square miles. This gives the Yakutat Bay earthquake a place among the very greatest earthquakes of historic times. The other great shocks, without exception, resulted in heavy loss of life, the number of persons killed reaching in one of them the enormous total of over 60,000. The Yakutat Bay shock was fortunately free from fatalities, not because it was less severe than the others, but on account of the sparsely settled character of the region in which it occurred.

This report—"The earthquakes at Yakutat Bay, Alaska, in September, 1899"—is illustrated with halftone views showing the effects of the earthquake, maps and seismograms of the shock as recorded at places as far distant as Batavia, Java; Cape Town, South Africa; and Catania, Italy. A copy of the report may be obtained free on application to the director of the geological survey, Washington, D. C.

INCREASE IN FUEL BRIQUETS

Outlook Pomising for a Substantial Production—Briquets a Highly Desirable Fuel

Considerable progress has been made in the development of fuel briquetting in the United States during the last two years, according to Edward W. Parker, in a statement just made public by the United States geological survey. This country, however, still lags far behind some of the European countries, particularly Germany, in this line of industrial activity. In 1909 the production of fuel briquets in the United States was 139,661 short tons, valued at $652,697, an increase of nearly 65 per cent in quantity over 1908. In 1911 the production amounted to 212,443 short tons, valued at $769,721, the increase in two years amounting to 72,782 short tons, or 52 per cent, in quantity, and to $317,024, or 70 per cent, in value.

In Mr. Parker's opinion, more attention should be given to this industry, as on it depends to a considerable degree the utilization of some grades of fuel which are now wasted or sold at less than the actual cost of production. The reprehensible practice of shooting bituminous coal "off the solid"—a practice notably prevalent in the fields of noncoking coal in the Mississippi valley—produces an inordinate proportion of slack, which might be made into briquets.

Low Price of Soft Coal Check to Development.

The principal factor operating against the more rapid development of fuel briquetting in the fields of noncoking coal in the middle west is the low price of the raw fuel with which the briquet has to compete. The average price for fuel in the northern middle states in 1911 ranged from about $1.10 to about $1.75. The cost of manufacturing briquets, exclusive of the cost of the raw material, is about $1 a ton, and although briquets possess undoubted advantage for domestic use over raw coal, householders have to be educated to the fact that the higher cost of the briquets is more than offset by their desirability. In Germany the briquetting industry has made extraordinary progress, the production in 1910 being 16,668,605 short tons, and in 1911, 18,554,020 tons.

Some probability of more substantial development of briquetting in the eastern states is indicated by the recent advance of 25 cents a ton on the domestic sizes of anthracite and the fact that there is little possibility of any future reduction in the prices of this fuel. In fact, further advances are more to be expected, in view of the rumored increase in royalty to be demanded by the owners of coal lands in the anthracite region.

Briquets Can Be Made From Waste.

It seems reasonable, therefore, to suggest that the utilization of the small sizes by manufacturing them into briquets, on which a profit could be made, might be more rational than selling these small sizes, as is now done, for less than the cost of production. The available quantity of raw material of this grade for briquetting is enormous. In 1911 the shipments of anthracite smaller than pea coal amounted to over 20,000,000 long tons, of which 85 per cent was obtained in the preparation of freshly mined coal. This 20,000,000 tons was worth not to exceed $30,000,000, but if manufactured into briquets of egg and stove size at a cost of about $25,000,000 it would have been worth $70,000,000. In other words, the outlay of an estimated $25,000,000, mostly in labor, would have brought a profit of 60 per cent. The enormous culm banks of the anthracite region, monuments of earlier mining methods, contain millions of tons of briquettable coal.

Binding Material From By-Product Coke Ovens.

In 1909 the geological survey suggested that greater inducement to the investment of capital in briquetting could be offered if investors were assured of a regular supply of suitable binding material. The manufacture of coke in by-product ovens, which yields coal-tar pitch that makes an excellent binder for briquets, has shown notable progress in the last two or three years, and as the by-product oven is continuing to supplant the beehive oven at an increasing rate, the supply of coaltar pitch at a reasonably low cost should be assured.

In addition to the slack from bituminous, subbituminous and semianthracite noncoking coal and small sizes of anthracite, three other kinds of raw material for briquetted fuel are available, namely, lignite, peat and coke dust. The Los Angeles Gas & Electric corporation of Los Angeles, Cal., operates a briquetting plant for utilizing the carbon obtained as a by-product in the manufacture of illuminating gas from crude petroleum. The briquets, or "boulets," make excellent domestic fuel.

The briquetting industry, according to Mr. Parker, has been retarded by attempts to exploit secret binders and processes for which extraordinary and impossible merits are claimed. The pathway of briquetting development is strewn with wrecks that are due to this cause. There is no reason for secrecy in connection with the constituents of patented binders. The field is so large that there is room for everyone to develop the industry in paths laid out by the experience of European countries.

Twenty Briquet Plants in the United States.

Twenty plants in the United States manufactured compressed fuel in 1911, an increase of four over 1909, but four of the 20 plants in 1911 were operated only in an experimental way or for demonstrating purposes. Of the commercial plants, eight used anthracite as a raw material, two used bituminous coal, two used semianthracite, one used refuse from oil-gas works, one used peat and two used mixed material. The manufacturers place their products on the market under special names, such as "boulets," "eggettes," "carbonets," "coalettes" and "patent fuel."

The population of the city of Buenos Aires on December 31, 1911, was 1,360,406, an increase of over 50,000 for the year. The population of the city of La Plata was estimated at 102,925.

MANGANESE ORES

American Production in 1911 Shows Increase, but Is Only a Fraction of Amount Imported

The production of manganese ores in 1911, according to E. F. Burchard, of the United States geological survey, was 2,457 long tons, valued at $24,586, a slight increase over the figures for 1910. The ore was mined in California and Virginia.

The importation of manganese ores continues to greatly exceed the domestic production, and will probably continue to do so as long as the principal sources of foreign supply are abundant and cheaply worked, and ocean freights are low. In 1911 the imports were 176,852 long tons, valued at $1,186,791, a decrease of 65,495 tons as compared with the importations for 1910. This decrease in the demand for manganese is attributed to the depression in the iron and steel industry.

The statistics of production and imports of manganese ores, and a discussion of the foreign and domestic sources of manganese, are contained in an advance chapter by Mr. Burchard from Mineral Resources for 1911, now being printed. The report also contains notes on some newly reported deposits in the United States. A copy of the report may be obtained free on application to the director of the geological survey, Washington, D. C.

SULPHUR MINED BY PUMPING

Seven or eight years ago the imports of Sicilian sulphur amounted to more than 100,000 long tons. With the growth of the sulphur industry in Louisiana, according to the United States geological survey, the imports of Sicilian sulphur in the United States have become almost a neglible quantity, the entire imports from Italy for 1910 being but 10,704 tons. The production of sulphur in the United States for 1910 was 255,584 tons, valued at $4,605,112, the great bulk of which came from Louisiana.

The mining of sulphur in Louisiana is an interesting process. The sulphur deposit, situated near Lake Charles, lies about 440 feet beneath the surface and is about 100 feet thick. Beds of quicksand overlying the sulphur render the sinking of shafts impossible, and the sulphur is therefore pumped to the surface. A well is driven through the numerous strata to the sulphur-impregnated beds, in much the same manner as is usual in sinking wells for oil and gas. In each well there are placed concentrically four lines of pipe, having diameters ranging from 10 inches to one inch. Superheated water and hot air are forced down the pipes and the spaces between them to melt the sulphur and to bring it to the surface. The hot water flows down between the two outer pipes, which are respectively 10 inches and six inches in diameter, and passes into the sulphur-bearing mass, melting the sulphur. The quantity of sulphur melted and the range of action of the water depend on the temperature of the water and on the pressure at which it is supplied. The heavy melted sulphur runs back into the sump around the bottom of the well pipe, which it enters through holes provided for this purpose. Hot compressed air is forced down through the smallest or one-inch pipe and at the bottom of the well mixes with the melted sulphur and forms an aerated mass sufficiently low in specific gravity to allow the water pressure to elevate the melted sulphur to the surface, where it is discharged into large rectangular vats, constructed of rough planking. The dimensions of the vats vary somewhat, but they are made as large as 350 by 250 by 40 feet, and some of them are so arranged that railroad trains can pass between them. After the sulphur has cooled and solidified, it is regularly mined the same as if it were a natural deposit.

LOCATION WORK

From Mining and Scientific Press.

Work existing upon claims when located cannot be entered, except by fraud; for the applicant must make oath that work entered was performed by himself, or grantors. Where the claimant relocates his claim to prevent others from locating it through his failure to do the annual labor, it is believed, though there is no decision or ruling on that point, that he has lost all prior work for patent purpose. It may be said in favor of the claimant, when making his patent application, that he has actually performed the work he reports, and if there has been no intervening location, and his relocation being more a nominal location, his rights date back to the first location on the principle of resuming work. Against him is the $500 expenditure implying that the work must be done on the location entered for patent, and not under a former location; also, that he should be penalized for trying to avoid annual labor by losing for patent purposes the work which he relocated. If the forfeiting owner has the right to relocate his own ground just as a stranger would have, as the court held in one case reported, then he should have no patent rights to his old work, just as a stranger would not. At any rate, the claimant should resume work on his forfeitable location instead of relocating; he should make amended locations instead of relocations, whenever defects or chances of location are to be adjusted.

OIL IN LOUISIANA

From Mining and Scientific Press.

Oil of remarkable purity has been found at Pine Prairie, Louisiana. It contains no asphalt, gasoline, or paraffin wax. The crude product contains a large percentage of illuminating oil.

Cadiz, the "white city" of Spain, has a centenary celebration this year, commemorating the adoption of a liberal constitution by the cortes and the raising of the French siege in 1812 by the Duke of Wellington. Once one of the greatest ports of the world, Cadiz is still a most picturesque city, and is said to extend a warm welcome to American tourists.

WORK AND PLAY FOR THE IDLE HOUR

Embroidered Design For Breakfast Jacket

This breakfast jacket makes very agreeable work for the Summer months, and can be very effectively done in several ways. It would be pretty of white lawn, embroidered in either white or some pale color, such as blue, pink or lavender; or, it could be done on a colored material, either in white or some contrasting color. A particularly attractive one would be of wash silk, worked in a harmonizing color, or of the same color as the silk. White worked in green is very cool looking, while the combination of white and pink or blue is very dainty.

MISS NORRIS' ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS

D C —Am very sorry indeed to disappoint you, but it would be impossible to publish an individual monogram When initials are given, they must be in the form of an entire alphabet, so that each reader may be able to use the letters

Two designs, suitable for bureau scarf and pillow cases were given May 26 1912, and if you wish just the scallop, the rest of the design can very easily be omitted

A corner can readily be turned from a straight scallop Lay the pattern in a plain surface, and crease a scallop in the center, then turn the upper piece back, keeping the outer edge straight on the creased fold, now crease this bias fold and you will have a perfect corner If you think the corner thus formed is too small use two scallops in the manner given above and you will have a larger though still perfect scallop

Lavender Cover

Mrs S O —One of the nicest ways to keep the household linen free from dust and also impart a delicate fragrance to it is by means of a lavender spread

The lavender spread is made to cover the linen, wherever it may be kept, in the linen drawer chest or closet, and is made of cotton crepe, with a filling of fine wadding

Book of Instruction

Miss J S —Books giving full directions for making Irish crochet lace, can be purchased in any store where needlework supplies are sold

The price of these books is usually 25 or 35 cents

Loops Instead of Buttonholes

M N L —Loops are used on fine lingerie gowns and blouses instead of buttonholes The size of the loops depends upon the buttons to be used and the loop is made by standing three or four threads and working over the threads with a buttonhole stitch which should be close with the pulled edge on the lower edge of the loop After the loop is buttonholed the thread should be fastened on the underside of the material

The length of the stitch for the standing threads should about equal the diameter of the button and the loops should be loose enough to fit easily over the buttons, but if the loops are used for hooks they should be flat on the material

Loops are also nice for fine underwear and children's clothes

Traveler's Pillow

A H —For traveling, a small square cushion is always to be desired and if covered with a soft dark silk will be most serviceable

A round case of pongee gathered under a covered button mold at each end, and securely fastened with buttons and buttonholes, with a cord handle attached, makes a covering into which the square pillow can easily be rolled and thus be easily carried from place to place

Brown or natural colored pongee and dark blue silk are perhaps the most serviceable materials for a traveler's pillow

Towel Ends.

Mrs G —The towel ends can either be embroidered in solid satin stitch or Kensington embroidery

The water lily would be effective if the full petals were done in solid work, and the petals that just partly show in outline and seeding

The lily design scallops can be made any width you wish, merely take the stitch one-half or three-fourths the depth of the scallops indicated, and in order that the work be even mark the width you wish the scallop to be before transferring and then transfer the modified scallops to the material so that you will have a guide when buttonholing the edge

Satin Cord

L B —Satin cord for dress trimming would not be at all hard to make Cut the satin in bias three quarter inch strips then sew the ends together matching them perfectly, into one long strip

Fold in the exact center and stitch one fourth of an inch from the folded edge

Turn the satin side out And this can be done with the aid of a tape needle Thread the needle with a coarse double thread and slip it into the opening at one end of the stitched satin With another needle fasten the coarse thread to the end of the stitched satin, and then push the tape needle through the satin working the fullness downward with the fingers so when the needle comes out at the end the satin will be turned

The tape needle is then threaded with soft yard and pulled through the satin The yarn fills the satin and a soft satin cord is the result

CLOTHES WORN AT THE GRAND PRIX

by MARY BUEL

Exclusive Photographs and Style News from the most fashionable Event in Paris. The latest Novelties in Hats and Gowns.

PARIS—(Special Correspondence)—Once every year the Paris dressmakers put their heads together and arrange to spring some sort of a surprise upon the waiting public. Occasionally they manage to achieve the really wonderful, as in the case of the "jupe culotte" of two years ago, which created more than the traditional nine days' sensation, but as a rule their surprises are of a more or less mild character and consist of the wearing of a shorter or longer coat, the tightening of a skirt, the introduction of a new color, or of half a dozen other novelties which only those versed in sartorial effects would notice.

This season, however, they have outdone themselves and the surprise and the sensation both have been complete.

It took place at the Grand Prix d'Auteuil, this being one of the most fashionable races of the year, and one which always brings out a great gathering of the smartest people. The surprise was dramatically arranged and was spectacular, two qualities dear to the French heart, and the sensation which followed was all that could have been desired.

Just at the moment when the crowd was the greatest, when the president of the republic and his guests had seated themselves in their box, when the grand stand was filled to overflowing and in front thronged with beautifully costumed women, there suddenly appeared a score or more of the prettiest of the Parisian mannequins in paniered and lace flounced gowns, in huge tulle hats garlanded in flowers or trimmed with nodding plumes, and each one of these charming girls showed her young and lovely face framed by hair powdered snow white.

The effect was magical, for even the oldest attendant upon the French racecourse could not boast of having seen the like before. It was the eighteenth century brought down to the twentieth. It suggested the court of Louis XVI, and the powdered and patched beauties of that time, and, above all, it was delightfully chic and attractive.

For the remainder of the afternoon these several models from some of the great Rue de la Paix establishments were the center of attraction. They were stared at, commented upon, and whenever they moved were followed by a curious crowd.

It is a strange fact that a little powder and a few patches can set the seal upon a fashion that has been projected, the fate of which is still hanging in the balance, but so it is. From now on the paniered gown will reign supreme, until rather something newer comes to take its place. Whether or not the powdered hair will have its imitators remains to be seen, but worn as it was by these pretty mannequins, why should it not have?

None of them wore their hair too elaborately arranged, for what was visible showed only some loosely waved locks drawn back from the face, but covering the ears, some tiny curls falling over the forehead and at the sides, or beneath the brim of the hat in the back a cluster of small, soft puffs. The powder puff, however, was liberally used, so that every tiny tendril of hair was completely covered, and whether the fair originator of this fashion was blonde or brunette could only be surmised from the eyes.

As must be the case with powdered tresses these darling young damsels were rouged and showed eyebrows that were delicately penciled and lashes that were not altogether free from a touch of blackening, and as for patches, they were as numerous and as odd in shape as those that were worn by any dainty beauty at the court of Marie Antoinette.

To describe in detail the gowns at the Prix d'Auteuil would be well nigh an impossibility, for they were almost as various in style as they were varied in color. One of the costumes worn by a Nex model, and she also was a powdered hair beauty, was of deep cerise chiffon, showing a narrow skirt finished about the lower edge with a deep hem put on with hemstitching. Above this hung a panier, draped fairly high on the left side and low on the other, and this was also of chiffon of a bright, strong purple shade.

The bodice, of course, was a combination of the two colors, skillfully put together, the red somewhat predominating. Like many of these paniered frocks the neck was finished with a fichu of the most exquisite lace and in the sleeves, which were to the elbow and close, appeared full lace ruffles.

The hat worn with this frock was of purple tulle, low of crown and with a wide and fairly straight brim. It was untrimmed except for a wreath of tiny roses which were arranged at the base of the crown in a stiff row.

There are a great many white satin frocks seen, many of these being trimmed with lace collars and cuffs, which show a lining of black chiffon. There are also innumerable models in white chiffon combined with black Chantilly lace, or with plain black tulle, and both are charming.

A gown in this last combination which was noticed Sunday was especially worth mentioning for it was so simple that any one might attempt it. The white chiffon skirt was accordion plaited and in the new manner, which makes the lower edge seem narrower than it is above, and this edge was trimmed with a band of black tulle six or seven inches wide and cut in points at the top. This was [illegible] to the skirt which gave it a much more [illegible] appearance. Over each hip beginning at the waist line were inserted [illegible] pieces of black tulle, those being finished at the lower edges in points and hemstitched on to the skirt.

The bodice was all white, but for a deep collar finished in points, all of black tulle, and on the sleeves these tulle points were put on in double rows pointed down, the points meeting on the outside of the arm, the lower edge of the sleeve being finished with a narrow ruffle of tulle. The simplicity of the dress was what made it attractive.

The more elaborate white gown must be spoken of, for although it was seemingly simple the materials were so beautiful that it was particularly noticeable. [illegible] The skirt of this was also accordion plaited and [illegible] was inserted a band of black Chantilly lace nearly three-quarters of a yard wide. The pattern of this was exquisite, large butterflies and delicate vines on the finest of a mesh background, and as the lining of the frock was of white liberty satin and white mousseline it brought out every detail of the lace.

The bodice was rather short waisted and was gathered slightly front and back. The trimming of this consisted of one of the lace butterflies which was inserted into the crêpe base just across the bust in front and another which was arranged on to the back. This last, however, was not inserted into the fabric, but instead was [illegible] on to the outside and showed the edges [illegible] wired and upstanding.

From beneath this butterfly back fell two long sash ends of black tulle which showed neither hem nor [illegible], but were cut off sharply and allowed to float. A black hat was worn with this gown, this being of tulle and [illegible] of it was an enormous aigrette of [illegible] and the hair beneath was powdered. One [illegible] of nothing but an etching in the sharpest of black and whites and a pretty one at that.

Next to the paniered frock comes the accordion plaited gown, which has almost as many admirers as the more elaborate one. These skirts are becoming to nearly every figure and they are extremely graceful, for while they give the suggestion of the long clinging line, equally they have far more fullness than the other skirts that are being worn. They are made of many materials, but those that are soft and supple really lend themselves better than others to this particular style. Crêpe de chine, cotton crepon, and voiles are all good and occasionally one sees a skirt of this variety made of the softest taffeta that is effective.

The bodices that are used with them are generally simple and are of some contrasting material, also they are frequently of a contrasting color. Cotton crêpe accordion skirts are charming with colored linen coats and those of voile with bodices of satin or taffeta are smart. While the skirts are generally in white or the palest shades the coats and bodices are as bright as they may be worn, or as brilliant as may be becoming. Cerise, purple, bright blue, and apple green figure among these little coats and bodices and if they are simple and unassuming in their style they are certainly bright enough in their coloring.

The long sleeve has come in, except for gowns that are thin or that are elaborate in make. Of course, the paniered skirt demands the short or elbow sleeve finished with ruffles and extremely dressy, but for all other styles of costume the long, close fitting sleeve is seen. Some show a line of buttons from wrist to elbow, but the favorite model is finished about the wrist with a ruffle of the material of the gown, or possibly with one of lingerie.

A new fad among women who have adopted this particular style is the wearing of heavy bracelets, or bangles on the outside of the sleeve just above the wrist. These are of gold and they fit closely, but they may be as elaborate as their wearer wishes in the matter of being set with gems or richly chased. Sometimes one sees a long chain attached to one of these bracelets and on the end of the chain a beautiful fan, or a small purse. Naturally these must be managed with care, but the woman who makes a study of such matters can usually accomplish this and disasters are few and far between.

The lingerie gown, which is no longer what its name would indicate, but really a luxurious costume, is being shown in some charming materials and most delicately made. Most of them are of lace and embroidery, linen or even batiste holding a reduced place in their making. Some are simple in form but are striking in their coloring and suggest both the pompadour and the directoire periods. Toile de Jouy enters largely into the make of many of these, sometimes forming paniers, or sometimes being used for petticoats or for trimmings on bodices or coats. The colors of the toile de Jouy are bright and the designs which are selected are always out of the ordinary and if possible somewhat eccentric.

Gown showing a skirt of white chiffon embroidered in ribbons in pale colors. Over this is a slightly draped skirt of white silk crepe finished with a wide flounce of black Chantilly lace and a deep hem of black chiffon. Model from Martial and Armond.

Hat of white tulle, veiled in the thinnest black tulle and lined with pale pink tulle, trimmed with aigrettes, one white, the other black. —Model from Alphonise.

Gown of black tulle covered with flounces of point d'Alencon lace, put on with little fullness. The entire back of the bodice and a portion of the front shows a veiling of black tulle. The belt of the gown is of cerise taffeta.—Model from Zenny.

Gown of white satin, over which falls a long tunic of dull blue chiffon. The satin gown buttons with crystal ball buttons on the bodice and part way down the skirt.—Model from Brandt.

Antlers Cup for Winner of Balloon Race on Exhibition

W. S. DUNNING.

ANTLERS TROPHY CUP PRESENTED TO THE SUMMER CARNIVAL BY W. S. DUNNING OF THE ANTLERS HOTEL.

To Be Known as the 'Antlers Trophy' and Given the Winner in the Transcontinental Balloon Race That Will Be Held on August 28

In the window of the Hamilton Jewelry company ... North Tejon street will be made today the first exhibit of the magnificent silver cup that William S Dunning, manager of the Antlers hotel, will present to the winner of the ... balloon race in this city August 28. Accompanying the cup will be a display of photographs which ... better than description ... of this kind is ... ike

Mr Dunning's cup is to be known as the Antlers trophy. It is a gray silver and stands ... in his high resting on a base of ebony wood. Across the top from tip to tip of the handles it has a spread of 16 inches.

The trophy has been beautifully engraved to show for what it stands. On one side is a picture of the Antlers ... with the rampant range ... the background. Around it appears this lettering: Pikes Peak Summer Carnival, August 27 1912. On the other side of the cup is a great racing balloon in full flight and about it is inscribed: The Antlers Trophy—Awarded to Winner of the Long Distance Balloon Race. Then follow inscriptions with blank spaces to be filled in after the race is decided as follows: Ascended at Colorado Springs, Colo. Landed at ... Traveled ... miles. Time of flight ...

The cup was purchased of the Hamilton Jewelry company and engraved by it. It is a costly piece of work, almost equal in value to the Lahm cup for which the racer here will also compete. That cup was offered by Frank Lahm, himself an expert balloonist. It is now held by Allan Hawley of New York, who won it in a flight made three or four years ago from Kansas City to the woods of Canada.

Races Not Like Ascensions

People passing the Hamilton Jewelry company's store should stop and take a look at the cup and pictures displayed. It has been a difficult matter to get local people to understand what this great race will be. A tourist was heard to remark on the streets the other day that he would not stay through to the carnival because he had seen a good many balloon jumps and did not care anything about them. Of course he had neither read it or thought anything about balloon races or he would not have been guilty of displaying such gross ignorance. It is to combat this that the townspeople should get up a bit on the subject.

In European cities and in various large cities of this country the young men who like their sport with thrills that have organized Aero clubs and there is a national organization known as the Aero Club of America. The latter controls all balloon racing matters as the National Racing Association controls the horseracing sport and as baseball and other national sports are controlled. This race at Colorado Springs is given under the sanction of the Aero Club of America and permission had to be secured 60 days in advance.

Ballooning is a costly sport, but so is horseracing. The carnival management could have had a meet of aeroplanists cheaper than it can put on a balloon race but they preferred to give the novelty. A race like this has never been started in the Rocky Mountains because it is going to be a real race with members of the St. Louis and Kansas City Aero clubs trying to win and take the two valuable cups.

All Pilots Licensed.

The pilots who go on these races are licensed by the Aero Club of America and have to qualify with years of experience and numerous ascensions before they receive their licenses. Captain H Eugene Honeywell of St Louis was engaged by the carnival committee to come here and take charge of this race. Since that time Captain Honeywell has won the great elimination race at Kansas City. Competing with seven other balloons he and his assistant traveled to Manassas, Va, ascending on the old battle ground. He traveled more than 900 miles and had gas enough to go further but did not want to get any nearer the sea coast. This entitles Honeywell to represent the United States at the international race at Stuttgart, Germany, in October to race for the James Gordon Bennett cup.

Captain Honeywell has secured members of the St Louis and Kansas City clubs to come here and handle the balloons. The pilots will be Albert [illegible] Lambert and Paul McCullough of St. Louis, John Watts and George Meyers of Kansas City and Honeywell [illegible] an assistant. These [illegible] business men of those cities who go on the trips for the pleasure to be derived from them and for any glory that may be gained for their clubs. Trophy cups look well on the mantle pieces of club dining rooms.

There are very strict rules governing balloon races and pilots are penalized and disqualified for disobeying these rules, such as letting the drag rope hang improperly or the anchor tear off the roof of a farmer's house. The pilot who had been picked as a sure winner in the late Kansas City race was not permitted to start because of holes in the bag of his balloon that had not been properly mended.

These balloons hold 80,000 cubic feet of gas and only three of them can be filled here. The committee could have had a half-dozen entries if it could have supplied enough gas. The race will be started at Washburn field, as that is the largest open space in the city to which gas can be piped.

The Equipment

Each of the great balloons is loaded with bags of sand which the pilot never touches until compelled to do so. If anyone expects to see the bags go soaring off high in the air he is going to be mistaken because they start along just as low as possible. Each balloon will carry food and provisions for at least four days. The equipment also consists of heavy fur caps, gloves, leggings, revolvers, shot guns, lime stoves, hot and cold bottles, field glasses, heavy underwear, blankets and bandages, for the balloons may go to frigid mountain peaks or to the hot deserts of Arizona.

To those who merely see the ascending balloons it appears that all the pilots and aids have to do is to wait until their gas runs out and then descend and take a chance upon having beaten their opponents. As a matter of fact, from the instant the balloon leaves the ground until the time of its landing it is an endless task to manage the big bags correctly. Ballooning is a poor sport for those who cannot stand intense excitement without sleep from 20 to 40 hours.

After finding the proper air currents the job of saving ballast is encountered. As many bags as can be possibly carried are taken along when the bag is raised and it is the best pilot who saves the most sacks of sand for the critical moment when a rise is needed and can be effected. Getting high up is a problem at times and it is a fixed habit with all balloonists to carry with them only such clothing and accessories as can be thrown away without being missed.

Think First of Distance.

An expensive vacuum bottle, a good raincoat, a pair of trousers and even shoes, hastily thrown overboard and lost have been good for an additional few miles and it is the miles the pilots crave.

Although baskets are equipped with wicker beds which are suspended inside like an upper berth, little rest is taken. What is indulged in generally comes between midnight and 4 o'clock in the morning. Atmospheric changes during these hours are least noticeable and the balloon will take care of itself in that time. But the warmth of the sun will send the bags soaring while its setting will contract the gas and cause it to shoot earthward. Here is where the sand is useful. Casting it off will cause a new ascension.

In a balloon there is absolutely no sense of motion. Instruments are carried which indicate whether the balloon is rising or falling. There is another instrument looking much like a watch, but sensitized to the air. By it one can determine the exact distance from the earth. Due to shifting elevations this instrument must be carefully watched as there is a great difference in altitude between the various cities and what would clear widely in many cities would cause the basket to drag upon the ground in others. To guard against accident most of the pilots carry maps which give altitude figures on all of the cities on the various routes.

"OUT OF THE FOLD" AT GRAND OPERA HOUSE THIS WEEK

Opening tomorrow evening and running the entire week James Hawley and Garrick Players will be seen in one of the prettiest rural comedy dramas ever written "Out of the Fold."

Manager Faught produced this play with his St Louis stock company which proved to be one of the best weeks for attendance during the season. It is a play that appeals to every one both young and old. The novelty third act that of the country schoolroom scene is by far one of the best comedy acts now offered on the stage in this line.

Have you ever gone to a country school?

Did you ever have to read an essay or sing a song on Friday afternoon?

Did you ever shoot beans with a rubber in school?

Did you ever have some bully take your pie away from you when you brought your lunch to school?

Such things as these, a very pretty love story, a series of incidents sustained by the love of a country school teacher makes "Out of the Fold" a rattling success.

A new and complete scenic production will be offered this week being the same high-class production which the building crew offered for "Quincy Adams Sawyer" a few weeks ago.

Time, Place and Girl

The management of the James Hawley company announces that they will offer for the first time in stock west of Chicago Mort T. Sing's greatest musical comedy "Time, Place and Girl." The highest royalty ever paid by any stock organization in this city will be paid for this piece. It is without doubt one of the best musical comedies released for stock. Its music is enchanting. Its comedy the funniest and in the hands of the Hawley players it will be the biggest production and most successful play any stock company has ever undertook to produce in Colorado Springs.

REGULAR THEATRICAL SEASON OPENS AT THE OPERA HOUSE

On September 9 the regular theatrical season opens at the Opera house with Cohan & Harris latest New York and Chicago success, the melodramatic farce "Officer 666" by Augustin McHugh.

Manager Nye will in the near future publish names and dates of the attractions to follow for the balance of the season. This season's bookings promise to be by far the best in many years. New York and Chicago have had many successes in the last 10 months of which will be seen here this season. Such attractions will appear as 'Bought and Paid For,' 'Bunty Pulls the Strings,' 'Louisiana Lou,' "The Rose Maid" and 'Little Boy Blue.'

"Officer 666," Still Runs On

Up to date no charge has been made against this latest Cohan and Harris success tending in any way to arrest it in its onward march toward Chicago's long-distance record while other attractions have been tried and found wanting in popularity and for that reason, ordered closed.

The record of five months made in the time of year when Chicago managers are usually content to leave the amusement field entirely in the hands of the out-of-door enterprises is the wonder of the season while the box office receipts show to the fact that it is a profitable run and not forced, as is so often the case.

The coolest crook and the most blase lover in the whole world are to be found in the cast of "Officer 666." The crook calmly assumes the name and occupies the house of the absent millionaire and nonchalantly proceeds to rifle the residence of its valuable paintings while the lover who is mistaken by the police for the picture thief they are trailing, gets his wrists ornamented with a pair of steel handcuffs and thus manacled proposes and is accepted by the divinity upon whom his choice has fallen.

"Officer 666" is an unusual play. It makes you laugh. It keeps you guessing while it administers some delightful surprises in the way of unexpected thrills that are particularly pleasant to receive and agreeable to recall.

"VOTES FOR WOMEN," TWO REEL RELIANCE FEATURE MONDAY AT THE MAJESTIC

So much has been said and so much has been written in the newspapers about woman's suffrage and the suffrage movement in general that it is superfluous for us to say anything about it, excepting that we're in favor of it. We're also in favor of all the ladies coming to the Majestic theater on Monday and seeing this great two-reel, 2,000-foot feature photo-play, "Votes for Women." We know you'll like it, for all the prominent ladies in the suffrage movement took part in the making of it. There was Dr Anna Shaw, Jane Addams and ever and ever so many more ladies of equal prominence. But we're not going to tell you all of them because we want you to come here and see them as they are pictured on the screen.

Oh my, yes! There are other features as well and they're good ones too. Pat Powers ("God bless the Irish") made one. It's called "Her Life Story." Wouldn't you like to hear it; hear of the many times she was glad and the many times she was sad, yes, and sympathize with her in her sadness and laugh with her in her gladness? Well you can do both, if you so will, 'cause she'll be with us Monday all day. Why yes! There's a Nestor. 'Fur and Feathers' is its name, and they're always costly. We've bought a few in our time so we sure know, haven't we? You bet you. Yes, there's another one but we're not going to tell you about that, because it's a surprise.

You know George? Ah ha. Well, he makes the music for us and we guess it's a good 'cause all is girls like Hockey," even if he has red hair. Oh, shaw.

This Is Farewell Week for Malcolm Duncan at the Burns Theater

Malcolm Duncan will conclude his engagement with The Burns Theater Stock company on Saturday night, August 17, in Nat Goodwin's comedy success, "A Gilded Fool." Mr. Duncan will begin rehearsals for his appearance with Lewis Waller, the noted English actor, on August 22, appearing at Daly's theater, New York city, for an unlimited run.

The announcement of the departure of Mr. Duncan will unquestionably be regretted by thousands of The Burns theater patrons, for he has made a host of friends and admirers in Colorado Springs, and the pleasure his talents have provided will not be soon forgotten.

Mr. Duncan selected for his final week's appearance "A Gilded Fool," and that he preferred to be seen in this role is sufficient guarantee that he will leave a most delightful impression.

However, it will be recalled that the Goodwin comedy is not a one-actor play by any means, and really demands the very best of dramatic support. The Burns management feels equally safe in saying that the support will be all required, and the entire company will be seen to advantage.

"A Gilded Fool" has all the romance that is consistent with modern conditions and times, and possesses the whimsical philosophy of "The Admirable Crichton," or "What Every Woman Knows."

When Henry Guy Carleton wrote "A Gilded Fool" he did his best, for not before or since has he been able to produce anything nearing it in play value.

It requires just such an actor as Malcolm Duncan to make "A Gilded Fool" possible, and, with excellent support and superb staging, this production will be one of the most artistic of The Burns summer theatrical season.

There is that something in "A Gilded Fool" which makes women love it—and men enjoy it. There isn't a bad part in the play, and not a character that cannot be handled in a remarkably clever manner by The Burns cast. In fact, no other legitimate comedy could so well show the acting strength of the entire company.

While it may be promising a great deal, patrons of The Burns are assured one of the most satisfactorily, if not the most pleasing, dramatic effort of this already remarkably successful season in the presentation of "A Gilded Fool."

There will be no increase in prices for this comedy masterpiece—just 25 to 75 cents for the night performances and 25 to 50 cents for the Tuesday and Saturday matinees.

WALTER P. RICHARDSON, WHO SUCCEEDS MALCOLM DUNCAN AS LEADING MAN AT THE BURNS THEATER AUGUST 19.

Walter P. Richardson, who succeeds Malcolm Duncan at The Burns theater, making his initial appearance on Monday night, August 19, is one of the best-known stock darmatic leading men on the American stage.

Mr. Richardson is not only a picturesque type of man, but is recognized nationally as a capable actor, and has held numerous enviable engagements.

A Canadian by birth, of French parentage, he has inherited such romantic qualities as adds greatly to his work, and while Mr. Richardson would only sign for a very brief stay in Colorado Springs, he is sure to win a following which is only possible where the highest class of talent is present.

In "Pierre of the Plains," the great Selwyn play in which Mr. Richardson starred, the Philadelphia Enquirer said: "Walter Richardson as Pierre in 'Pierre of the Plains' is matchless. His presence, magnetic personality, and intelligent reading, all, proclaim the young actor with a great future."

What the Enquirer said has been endorsed by scores of the best dramatic reviewers in this country, and The Burns management spared no expense in securing—if even for only a limited period—an actor worthy as a successor to Malcolm Duncan.

NOTED CANADIAN WOMAN MOUNTAIN CLIMBER GIVES POINTERS TO THOSE AMBITIOUS TO SCALE PEAKS

A number of Colorado Springs members of the Colorado Mountain club went to Denver Friday to join the club in its ascent of James Peak yesterday and today. The climb is the first of the season for the club, but many others have been arranged for this summer. Dr. M. Ethel V. Fraser, one of the most enthusiastic members of the club, has one particular rule for those who are ambitious to climb peaks without the attendant discomforts that often follow. The rule is to "take it easy."

Taking it easy doesn't mean loafing along and sitting down on a log every few minutes, but it does mean taking time to look at and enjoy the scenery, to pick occasional wild flowers, if your tastes run in that direction, and to walk steadily at an even gait rather than to go out after speed records.

It means to dress properly—leaving high heels, long skirts and thin stockings behind, and finally, it means—if you are at all addicted to heart trouble, don't try mountain climbing at all, for the higher up you go the more effort it is, and a person with a weak heart has no business making an effort of that kind.

"Pikes Peak Too Civilized."

Dr. Fraser is a Canadian, and next to the skating and snow-shoeing that she was practically "brought up" on, she loves mountain climbing, and the more rocky and woody, and generally unsociable a mountain is, the better she likes it. Dr. Fraser scorns to climb Pikes Peak because it is "too civilized."

The correct costume is an important part of climbing. In the Canadian Rockies the Alpine clubs laugh to scorn a woman who appears for a climb clad in skirts, for they are dangerous both to herself and the climbers below her—the skirts may dislodge rocks or catch on branches. Dr. Fraser, when she climbs, wears a suit consisting of a Norfolk coat, knickerbockers, high boots, and in adjustable short skirt that may be taken off and placed in a "rook sack." When she leaves her home, bound for the mountains, she wears this same costume.

"It attracts attention some times," says Dr. Fraser, "but the people who know me know I'm going climbing when they see me dressed like that, and the people who don't know me ought to know what I was doing, so it's all right."

Dr. Fraser has climbed Mt. Evans, one of the qualifying climbs for membership in the Mountain club, with a 20-pound pack on her back. She has also left Denver, reached the summit of Mt. James, and returned to Denver in two days. She did this last summer, in company with Miss Lucretia Vaile.

"I was cured of diarrhoea by one dose of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy," writes M. E. Gebhardt, Oriole, Pa. There is nothing better. For sale by all dealers.

MAJOR WINS MISSOURI PLUM OVER COWHERD

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 10.—Attorney General Elliot W. Major has won the Democratic nomination for governor of Missouri by a safe plurality over William S. Cowherd of Kansas City, according to official returns from nearly all of the counties and the complete unofficial figures from the other counties. Figures today show Major has a lead of 3,115 votes. Cowherd's chief supporter in St. Louis, Harry B. Hawes, sent a telegram of congratulation to Major and said the returns indicated Major's nomination beyond a doubt.

MINORITY HOUSE MEMBERS DEFEND CATLIN'S SEAT

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10.—Minority members of the house election committee, which investigated the contest between Representative Theron E. Catlin and Patrick F. Gill of St. Louis, Mo., today filed a report in Mr. Catlin's favor. The majority of the committee voted to unseat him because of the large sum of money shown to have been used in his election. The minority ... he had no knowledge of ... expenditures made by his father.

All Sores Are Not Cancerous

While all Old Sores are not cancerous in their nature, every slow healing ulcer shows a degenerated condition of the blood. Virulent impurities in the circulation produce angry, discharging ulcers, while milder and more inert germs are usually manifested in the form of indolent sores or dry, scabby places. Efforts to heal an old sore with external applications always result in failure because such treatment does not reach the blood. S. S. S. heals old sores of every nature by purifying the blood. It goes to the fountain-head of the trouble and drives out the germ-producing poisons and morbid impurities which prevent the place from healing. Then a stream of rich, nourishing blood, which S. S. S. creates, causes a perfect and natural knitting together of all flesh fibres, making a thorough and permanent cure. The sore does not "come back" when S. S. S. has made a cure, because its source has been destroyed. Book on sores and ulcers and medical advice free.

ALCOHOL FROM PLANTS

From the Dundee Advertiser.

The value of alcohol for industrial purposes, and especially as fuel, has been vividly brought to mind during the recent dislocation of rail traffic and other industries caused by the strike of colliers. It is for that reason interesting to find in the current issue of the Kew Bulletin a review of the sources from which various forms of alcohol are obtained. The number of plants, using the term in its widest sense, that yield alcohol suitable for commercial purposes is far greater than one would expect. In the review under notice they are grouped under separate headings, viz., fruits, roots, grain, stems, leaves, inflorescences, wood or woody substances and peat. Potatoes and beet roots, which are grown on an extensive scale in Germany and France, respectively, for the purpose, are the best roots for producing raw alcohol, and it is stated that almost any hard wood will produce methyl, or wood spirit, the kinds generally used being the beech, oak, thorn, birch and maple. Peat as a source of alcohol has not yet been fully investigated.

BIG RANCHES BROKEN UP

From Pasadena Star.

The romantic days of the great rancho of baronial extent and flavor are passing. One by one these great bodies of land are being broken up into small holdings and put on the market to attract the small rancher with his few hundreds or few thousand dollars, who desires to build up a home and produce in a modest, intensive way. The vast ranches doubtless served a good purpose at one period of California's history. But the day of their economic usefulness is past. The great ranches, held intact in this day, become a detriment to development and advancement. A hundred ranches of 10 acres each, intensively cultivated, are worth vastly more than one rancho of 1,000 acres, indifferently cultivated or managed. The small ranch has wealth-producing possibilities in this state as yet scarcely dreamed of. With the land of the state subdivided and in the hands of small holders working the soil to the utmost of its productive capacity, and yet conserving its fertility so as not to wear it out, the riches of the commonwealth will continue to increase amazingly.

THE POLITICAL SITUATION AS INDICATED BY COLORADO NEWSPAPERS

IN this state there are three Republican factions; the standpat, acid test, Taft Republicans; the Progressive Republicans who are trying to make the Republican party progressive by appealing to the voters in the direct primaries; and the third party Progressives who entirely agree with the Progressive Republicans on state issues, but who have severed all connection with the Republican party. There are at least three divisions in the Democratic party; the Speer, or machine, Democrats, who controlled the state assembly and nominated a complete ticket; the "platform" Democrats who bolted the assembly and afterward went back; a second group of "platform" Democrats who bolted "for keeps;" the combined group of "platform" Democrats who have put a complete ticket into the field by petition; and those Democrats, such as Lindsey, who have joined the third party Progressive movement.

POSITION OF THE DENVER NEWSPAPERS.

The complicated situation is indicated by the position taken by various representative newspapers of this state. The Rocky Mountain News, Independent-Democratic, has virtually come out for Woodrow Wilson; however, it feels very kindly toward Costigan and Lindsey and the third party movement for Roosevelt. At the same time, it has leanings toward the Shafroth-Thomas-Tynan ticket nominated by the "platformists," although it heartily condemned the re-bolt of the bolters; its position is still more complicated by its commendation of "the insurgent Republicans who declined to take part in the state assembly" for they "have been justified before the people for their refusal. In addition it may be remarked that Phil Stewart stands for the thing that The News has always supported—the destruction of the bi-partisan machine.

Comment has been made at length in these columns on the present position of The Denver Republican. The Republican is unequivocally for Taft. However, it is in sympathy with the Progressive Republican movement "inside the party outside the machine." Its latest editorial statement, published yesterday, is this:

"The Republicans who believe in fighting for Republican principles WITHIN THE REPUBLICAN PARTY have as much right as Republicans of any other way of thinking to have their names placed upon the Republican primary ballot. The attempt to shoo them into the Bull Moose party by circulating sensational reports about what Colonel Roosevelt is alleged to demand is absurd.

The feelings of the Denver Express have been lacerated. Costigan, whom that paper loves exceedingly, is the nominee of the Progressives for Governor. Merle Vincent, to whom it is devoted, is the choice of the Progressive Republicans for United States Senator.

The Denver Post has its ear to the ground. Hist! It hears rumblings of Stewart's whirlwind campaign and is pleased. The Post is going to be PROGRESSIVE; there is no doubt of that; but what particular brand of progressivism The Post will adopt is a question.

ATTITUDE OUTSIDE OF DENVER.

The Pueblo Leader, "an independent newspaper," has announced its allegiance to Woodrow Wilson. That paper has also come out strongly for Philip B. Stewart for Governor.

The Grand Junction News is an enthusiastic supporter of Philip B. Stewart and the Progressive Republicans.

In the entire list thus far there is no newspaper which has held a party name up to the people saying "Behold," and expecting that the dazzling name would blind the eyes of the spectators to the actions of the prestidigitators who would detract attention from themselves and to their label. The audience does not fall down and worship. Party names are no longer names to conjure with. However, there are two papers in the state which are still talking about "party regularity" and "loyalty to the principles of Alexander Hamilton;" which still "point with pride" and "view with alarm." Those papers are The Pueblo Chieftain and The Evening Telegraph. It is needless to say that they are consistent supporters of the Guggenheim-Stevenson machine in state and nation.

Newspapers are an index to public opinion. An intelligent reading of the newspapers of Colorado will reveal that there is an overwhelming progressive sentiment in Colorado. As time goes on the wide extent of that sentiment will be made increasingly clear.

COLORADO SPRINGS AS A CONVENTION CITY

COLORADO SPRINGS is a good place in which to hold conventions. It has good hotels, unrivaled scenic surroundings, an excellent climate, summer and winter, first-class convention halls and railway facilities. The residents of this city know all this. However, the majority of the people of the United States do not. It is necessary to tell them.

Mr. M. W. Purcell of this city decided to tell the Knights of Columbus something of the advantages that Colorado Springs possesses as a convention city. The Knights of Columbus were impressed; they believed Mr. Purcell's story; they have proved it to be true by holding their convention here. They say that they are pleased with the treatment accorded them and with the many advantages that the city affords. The citizens of Colorado Springs are equally pleased to have had such a fine body of men and women as their guests.

Incidentally, it may be remarked that Mr. Purcell's efforts are worthy of imitation by other citizens.

NONSENSE ABOUT BULL MOOSE DEMANDS.

From the Denver Republican

Some people have a great way of talking or writing nonesnse about politics—probably the result of an itching deisre to fool their hearers or readers. An illustration in point is the story circulated that the Bull Moose chief is going to force Mr. Stewart to retire from his candidacy for the Republican nomination for governor and fall in behind Lindsey and Costigan.

This story is based upon the assumption that Colonel Roosevelt can make Mr. Stewart withdraw from the Republican party and do what he has declared all along he will not do. It would in any case be a most violent assumption, which the people of Colorado would not accept, unless, ceasing to be an assumption, it became an accomplished fact.

The whole story is, however, definitely disposed of by Mr. Stewart's declaration both that he has heard of nothing of the kind and that he is fully determined to go through the primaries. The petition that his name be placed upon the Republican primary ballot as a candidate for governor was filed last week, and it will under no circumstances be withdrawn. Mr. Stewart is going through the Republican primaries and so will the other progressive members of the Republican party.

The local Bull Moose crowd and Mr. Stewart and his associates threshed all this out early in the campaign. Mr. Stewart declared, in substance, upon that occasion that he would not join the new party but that he would make his fight for progressive principles WITHIN the Republican organization. Judge Lindsey and Mr. Costigan understood his position clearly. They recognized that, however friendly with Colonel Roosevelt he might be, he would not join them in organizing a new party in this state. They knew that he would make the race for governor as a Republican, if he received the Republican party nomination.

It would be stretching the claims of friendship pretty far to insist that in order to please a friend Mr. Stewart should abandon the Republican party and, reversing the position he has already taken, come trailing in behind Judge Lindsey.

The Republicans who believe in fighting for Republican principles WITHIN THE REPUBLICAN PARTY have as much right as Republicans of any other way of thinking to have their names placed upon the Republican primary ballot. The attempt to shoo them into the Bull Moose party by circulating sensational reports about what Colonel Roosevelt is alleged to demand is absurd. They are Republicans, and however much they may admire Colonel Roosevelt personally, they recognize that the most effective way to establish progressive principles is through the Republican party. They are not going to desert the party and accept the leadership of Judge Lindsey.

CLOTHES AND MORALITY."

From the Kansas City Journal.

A good deal of tommyrot is being printed nowadays about the "moral" effect of women's clothes. Since a half-witted youth in New York committed a revolting murder and made the silly plea that he was driven to do it because of a "beautiful woman," the moralists are rushing into print with urgent arguments against the present styles in feminine clothing, and one western enthusiast insists that the "tight-fitting dress and bodice should be taken from women by law, if necessary." All of which makes appropriate silly-season reading.

When women declare solemnly that they do not dress to attract attention, they convince nobody of either their truth or their sincerity. A wise old philosopher asked pertinently, "For whom does the blind man's wife array herself?" Of course, women dress to attract attention. And why shouldn't they? This is a world-old privilege and the talk of taking women's styles away from the sex, "by law if necessary," is highly amusing. If it is the purpose of these distressed reformers to make women homely, they have a very large contract on their hands. Women have a fundamental and inalienable right to be just as pretty as they can make themselves. It is part of the divine plan that women should be "tantalizing," and only a low moral pervert will be dangerously affected by any kind of costume that fashion cleels for the passing season and that respectable women will consent to wear. To be sure, the styles of this particular summer are not especially attractive nor do they greatly enhance the natural charms of women. But that is the business of the women themselves, and if they find no fault with fashion surely men should not.

If the reformers are to resort to law to make women modest and "unattractive" it would strike the casual commentator that the best way to go about it would be to issue an edict that American women shall follow the Mohammedan custom. Our women should be dressed in gray gunny sacks, with their hair cut close and their faces smeared with grime. Then any woman who dared be coy and pretty under these adverse conditions should be imprisoned far from the gaze of weak and susceptible men. It is true that comparatively few women dress with that quiet effectiveness which makes for the highest form of beauty. Most of them wear loads of false hair, they paint, they encase themselves in ridiculous hobbles and wear wholly unbecoming hats. But some do not. And for this beautiful minority the Lord be praised. Fashion, however, never succeeds in making women so unattractive that men cease to be charmed by them. The list of marriage licenses grows longer as the years go by.

IN THREE SHORT YEARS.

From the Philadelphia American.

"And I heard a great voice out of heaven saying, Behold, the tabernacle of God is with men.—Rev., xxi, 3:4.

Three years ago last Sunday Dr. Charles W. Eliot, former president of Harvard, startled the religious world, especially that part of it avowedly orthodox in its profession of faith, with a lecture, on "The Religion of the Future," delivered at the close of the eleventh session of the Harvard summer school of theology.

In brief, he said the religion of the future will not be based on authority, either spiritual or temporal; that in it there will be no personifications of the primitive forces of nature; no identification of any human being with the Eternal Deity; that its prime object will be service to others and contributions to the common good; that it will not be gloomy, ascetic or maledictory.

"The new religion will not attempt to reconcile men and women to present ills by promises of future blessedness, either for themselves or for others," he said, to the astonishment of thousands of clergymen who had regarded him as a "conservative" Christian.

"Such promises have done infinite mischief in the world, by inducing men to be patient under sufferings or deprivations against which they should have incessantly struggled. The advent of a just freedom for the mass of mankind has been delayed for centuries by just this effect of compensatory promises issued by churches.

The religion of the future will approach the whole subject of evil from another side, that of resistance and prevention. The Breton sailor who had his arm poisoned by a dirty fishhook made a votive offering . . . and prayed for a cure. The workman today who gets cut or bruised by a rough or dirty instrument goes to a surgeon, who applies an antiseptic dressing to the wound and prevents the poisoning.

"The surgeon is one of the ministers of the new religion. When dwellers in a slum suffer the familiar evils caused by overcrowding, impure food and cheerless labor, the modern true believers contend against the sources of such misery by providing public baths, playgrounds, wider and cleaner streets, better dwellings and more effective schools—that is, they attack the sources of physical and moral evil.

"The new religion cannot supply the old sort of consolation, but it can diminish the need of consolation or reduce the number of occasions for consolation."

The really remarkable part of this revolutionary address is not what was then said by Dr. Eliot, but the widespread manner in which similar views have since found expression.

What was wondered at 157 weeks ago is now a commonplace of conversation on every hand. In the short interval thousands of clergymen and tens of thousands of laymen have made equally "amazing" statements, and numerous boards and investigating committees have issued reports which confirm not only the need for a new working basis for religious endeavor, but the existence of such agencies.

Indeed, "the tabernacle of God is with men." More and more the thinking and feeling masses are coming to see that religion is not a matter of form and ceremony, but a matter of service and the common good.

More and more we are learning that deeds, not doctrines, are worth while.

THE THEATER ORCHESTRA.

From the New York Tribune.

The announcement that many of the playhouses in this city will dispense with orchestras next season will be welcome news to a large class of theatergoers. An orchestra to play during intermissions is a useless expense, which in these days of high prices could well be diminated. Moreover, apart from the question of cost, an orchestra to provide entertainment while the curtain is down does not fit in with conditions in the modern New York theater. The intermissions in most New York playhouses are a burden and the playgoer will be benefitted by any change which tends to shorten them.

Our theaters are not so constructed and equipped as to make pauses between the acts agreeable. In European cities spectators are accustomed to leaving their hats and wraps in the lobbies. Conveniences for checking such impediments abound, and there are also refreshment rooms attached to the theater. There is also more space between the rows of chairs for ingress and egress, and a seat holder can go in and out without annoying his neighbors.

Here the license laws make the serving of refreshments impracticable and the lack of coatroom facilities leaves men and women burdened with the care of hats and wraps and discourages any free movement between acts into the lobbies. The seats are so crowded together that pushing into the aisle usually involves discomfort to others, if not actual rudeness. Under the circumstances the most sensible thing to do is to remain seated throughout an intermission, and it is therefore important that the intermissions should be brief.

Most of the successful plays of the day are those which require little change in stage settings. The old cumbersome methods of shifting scenery have been improved on, and every advance made in the direction of simplicity and celerity means a gain in comfort to the audience. Where there is no orchestra to while away the intervals with dubious entertainment the waits will necessarily become shorter. The ideal play in New York nowadays is that which is run off so expeditiously as to give no one an excuse for wanting to go out between the acts.

NO. 1—REV. WILLIAM KIRBY

Every course of study has had its pioneer—one who has taken it up seriously and devoted a lifetime to its furtherance. Among the men of the last century who were public benefactors in the study of natural history none deserves more consideration than William Kirby, who was born at Witnesham Hall, Suffolk, England, in 1759, and died at Barham, England, in 1850.

It was from the playthings of the child William that his mind became filled with the fascinating ideas of natural form and growth. From an old cabinet filled with family treasures his mother often gave him a collection of shells with which to amuse himself. He noted their shapes, their various colors and each peculiar characteristic. When he learned the name of each shell he could describe its every line, curve and shape of coloring.

In his childish heart had been planted the love of nature that ever after was his solace and joy. He became a botanist, while he sought to enlarge his knowledge of nature, and while a mere boy made some excellent collections of gathered and pressed plants.

He went to Caius college, Cambridge, and entered the ministry. Later he became pastor of the parish of Barham where the charming scenery and natural beauties of the country but added to his passion for the study of all natural forms.

He has left the story of his first serious study, of a beautiful golden bug, how he confined the beauty in a small bottle of gin, and how he supposed it dead and took it out for study the next day on the ledge of his window. But it was not dead, for the sun revived it, and it was for William Kirby a miracle.

When the famous Linnean society was formed, Mr. Kirby was one of the original members. In 1815, with the collaboration of a Mr. Spence, he published his "Introduction to Entomology," that went through five editions in a few years. It was also translated into German and published at Stuttgart.

His friend, Mr. Spence, tells how Mr. Kirby collected his treasures for study. He took with him in his walks a forceps, net and a small water-net with which he captured bees, flies and water insects, and these he put in a collection box, or in a small vial he carried in his pockets.

When he was 78 years of age, he brought out his book, the "Fauna Boreall-Americans," in which 447 insects were described.

Mr. Kirby lived to be almost 90 years—a lonely old man. He had lost two devoted wives, and no children had been born to him. Death had come to him where he had patiently waited for release.

The church at Barham holds all that is mortal of the man who aided the world to discover what insects would bring disaster among animals, crops and fruit trees.

Kirby was of middle height, broad-shouldered and strongly built, with broad forehead and small blue eyes, deeply set. His chief aim in life was to trace the benevolence and wisdom of the Creator in his works. Though no theological work of his, apart from sermons, was published, he wrote much on theology from the point of view of an orthodox anti-Calvinistic churchman. At his death his collection of insects were bequeathed to the Emotomological society.

SOUTH PACIFIC WONDERS

From the London News.

One of the most interesting quests which have ever engaged the attention of explorers will shortly be undertaken by Mr. W. Scoresby Routledge, the traveler.

Early in August Mr. Routledge, with his wife and a small party—including a navigating officer lent by the admiralty, which is taking great interest in the expedition—will leave England in the Mana, a 250-ton motor auxiliary yacht. They will attempt to solve the mystery of the wonderful archeological remains of Easter Island, in the south Pacific, and to make a complete survey of the island, which is the farthest outpost of the Polynesian race. The expedition was planned by Mr. Routledge in conjunction with the authorities of the British Museum, who regard it as of considerable importance.

On the island, which is about fifty square miles in extent, are immense platforms, facing the sea, formed of large stones fitted together with cement. Some of these stones weigh five tons; and in places the sea walls are nearly 30 feet high and over 200 feet long. On the land side of the platforms there are broad terraces, on which once stood colossal figures carved out of lava from an extinct crater, eight miles away.

On some of the platforms there are upward of a dozen images, now thrown from their pedestals and lying in all directions. The largest are 87 feet high but the majority vary from 14 to 16 feet. They are carved in the shape of human beings. Five of the statues were brought to England in 1868, and are now in the British Museum. On the island are also remains of stone houses, 100 feet long by about 20 feet high. It is to discover the origin of these works that Mr. Routledge is going to Easter Island. The present inhabitants of Easter Island know nothing of their construction. By some the theory is held that Easter Island is part of a submerged continent. If this were so it is thought that possibly sufficient manual labor might have been at hand to carry out the work.

DEFIES THE MEN

Mrs. Susie Wissler, the first woman mayor in Wyoming, who was elected on an independent women's ticket against Republican and Democratic candidates, has issued a wholesome declaration, in which she declares that she means to enforce the laws in the face of the organized opposition of the vicious interests. The city council, she says, composed of men alone, made the laws, and "they will have to take their own medicine."

AUGUST 11, 1882.

The Jackson Hose company team, which had been victorious in the state fireman's tournament at Silver Cliff, reached Colorado Springs, and were welcomed at the station by a large crowd. A procession was formed headed by the First Regiment Cavalry band and the team escorted up town. A banquet in honor of the team was held in the evening at Masonic hall.

The Brewster brickyard in the eastern part of the city was turning out an excellent quality of pressed brick, said to be equal to that made in Golden.

The final session of the teachers of deaf mutes, whose conference had been going on in Colorado Springs for several days, was held and the afternoon spent in a trip to the summit of the Peak on a Cog road special.

A trotting race between Joel Roe's Bucephalus and Young's Coburn was held on Judge Colburn's track east of town. Coburn was leading when his hobbles broke and threw him.

THE HASKIN LETTER

THE AGE OF PAPER

By FREDERIC J. HASKIN.

This is the age of paper. There is scarcely a condition in civilized life which is not now affected in some way by the use of paper. We may wear paper clothes, sleep under paper blankets, eat and drink from paper utensils and perhaps, in the not far distant future travel in vehicles made almost entirely of paper, since it has already been demonstrated that paper can be made strong enough for car wheels, and it is now being used for the inside paneling of cars and other vehicles. While paper making is not a new art and paper is produced in many countries, there are few, if any, places in which it is put to so many and such varied uses as in the United States, where its manufacture has assumed such tremendous proportion that it now represents annually fully two hundred millions of dollars in value with a rate of increase equaled by few other industries.

The art of paper making in Europe dates back to the twelfth century when the Moors were credited with making it in Spain in 1154. It traveled to Italy, Germany and France a little later and was made in England in the Fifteenth century. The first paper mill in this country was established near Philadelphia in 1690 and within the next century there were over forty paper mills in Pennsylvania and Delaware and several in New England. American paper always has had good standing for its quality as well as the number of its varieties. Many processes in paper manufacture originating in America have been adopted in Europe, one of the most important being the sulphite process of making paper from wood pulp which was discovered in 1867 by a Philadelphia chemist named Tilgman.

Principal Materials Utilized.

The three principal materials utilized in paper manufacture are rags, straw and wood. The earlier paper in Europe was made of rags although rice straw was used in China and Japan. Rags are still most in demand for the best quality of writing paper but the increase in the paper demand years ago far exceed the supply of rags, so some other material had to be substituted. The idea of utilizing wood pulp came first to some Italian paper makers who patented it in 1826, but their method was not practical. It was improved upon by manufacturers in Germany and England but wood pulp paper did not become a commercial possibility until after the sulphite process was discovered.

Not all classes of woods are suitable for paper manufacture under the present processes. The cone-bearing trees, such as pine, spruce and fir, produce the best results. Experiments now are being made by the bureau of plant industry and the forestry commission looking towards the production of good paper from such products as cornstalks and cotton hull waste. The increasing uses to which paper is being put call for the utilization of every possible waste product in its manufacture and methods are being sought to reduce the cost of utilizing such materials.

The use of paper blankets and bed quilts counds incredible to those who have not actually tested their value, but they are in growing demand. Last year a prominent Secret Service officer who is in the habit of spending weeks annually in a hunting camp, met a friend engaged in the paper manufacturing business. The officer happened to mention that he was less comfortable in camp than usual because he was short of blankets and the weather was colder. His friend suggested paper blankets. The officer at first scouted the idea disdainfully. The paper dealer persisted and sent a pair of paper blankets into the camp. The night following was even more chilly than before so the paper coverings were spread out over the bed with many jests by the fellow campers. To his surprise, that night the officer slept as warmly as if under the down quilt on his bed at home. "I never could have believed it," he told his friend a few days later. "There's more comfort in those paper blankets than in the best [illegible] of wool blankets which would weigh twenty times as much."

Paper Blankets Great Comfort.

A mother who had been in the habit of taking two children to a mountain resort in the summer always had complained of the cool nights and the insufficiency of bedding which is frequent in such places. This summer she put a pair of paper blankets in her trunk and like the Secret Service officer she will never again go away without them.

The use of paper in the manufacture of clothing is far more general than most people realize. Nearly 20 years ago there was a paper material known as fibre chamois introduced to the dress-makers when a certain stiffness was desired. It was this material more than any other which helped to mould the goodly proportions of the celebrated balloon sleeve of that period. It was also used to stiffen the bottom of the skirt at a time when Dame Fashion prohibited it clinging around the feet as is now the style. The durability of this fabric, as well as its warmth and flexibility, impressed every one who used it and improved forms of it have been used to some extent by tailors and clothing manufacturers ever since. It is used extensively as an interlining in automobile coats, in vests and other garments in which there is no great strain and its warmth and light weight make it valuable. As a stiffening it is often superior to either canvas or haircloth.

Paper undervests are now supplied for use when extra warmth is required. These garments are light in weight, easily discarded and cheap. They may be worn a few days and cast aside, thus saving a heavy laundry which at times may be a great advantage. Paper slippers are manufactured for indoor wear which seem to possess the acme degree of comfort and their low cost overcomes what they lack in durability. Many hotels supply their guests with paper slippers to wear in their rooms.

Paper Towels Invaluable.

Paper towels now are well known. They are used in the public wash rooms of hotels as well as in hospitals, office buildings and thousands of private homes. They come in different sizes and weights, but all possess excellent absorbent qualities. For travelers they are invaluable. Packages are put up which contain an assortment of paper towels and wash cloths and also an antiseptic comb of stiff paper, which may be thrown away after being used. Many dainty women really prefer one of these compact traveling packages, which may be bought for 10 cents to being troubled by carrying their own toilet supplies in their bags. Their sanitary value is unquestioned.

So far as is known no paper sheets and pillow cases are yet upon the market but there is no reason why they should not be and there is some talk of having these articles provided for use in sleeping cars as it is believed that they would possess sanitary advantage even over the freshly laundered linen. It is estimated that they could be produced at about the same cost as laundry work.

Paper table cloths and napkins are well known and have been in common use for years. They come in the daintiest designs imaginable as well as in numerous grades and qualities. Even the highest priced are usually considerably cheaper than the usual laundry prices of linen. It is now possible also to get the greatest variety of paper doilies, including lace effects in the finest kind of Irish and Cluny patterns and these also are cheap enough to be within reach of any one who cares for them.

Many housekeepers are turning towards the use of paper dishes to a great extent. Some women use them for dinner on the girl's day out as a means of avoiding the dish washing. A well-known Washington woman has for a number of years utilized many paper articles in her home, but this summer she carried the idea further than ever before. She has a cottage in the country to which she takes her family for the warmest weather. This

Health and Beauty Advice

BY MRS. MAE MARTYN.

Alda M.: A plain quinzoin hair-tonic will quickly stop irritation and soothe your tender scalp. To prepare, pour 1 ounce quinzoin into ½ pint alcohol and to this add ½ pint water. Using this quinzoin tonic regularly banishes dandruff and excess oiliness, makes the scalp healthy and induces an abundant growth of even-colored, fluffy, brilliant hair.

"Myra S.": I know you feel uncomfortable carrying around so much fat this hot weather, but if you dissolve 4 ounces parnotis in 1½ pints hot water and take a tablespoonful before meals you will soon regain your former weight and shapely figure. The parnotis treatment is quite harmless and dissolves the fat without any present or future ill effects. After your weight is where you want it, your flesh will be solid and the skin free from wrinkles. Then, too, this method does not call for dieting or violent exercise.

Bride: The skin on your hands and face will be of a velvety softness and free from blemish if you apply each day a plain almozoin cream-jelly made by adding 1 ounce almozoin to ½ pint cold water in which has been stirred 2 teaspoonfuls glycerine. This cream-jelly is elegant for ridding the skin of pimples, blackheads, freckles, lines and that "muddy" condition. It also rounds out hollows and lends a charming tint and youth-look to prematurely aged skins. You will find the almozoin cream-jelly far superior to anything you ever used, and it positively will not grow hairs.

Ethel: Use a delatone paste and you will be quickly rid of those annoying hairs. With some water mix enough powdered delatone to cover the hairs not wanted. Apply, and after 2 or 3 minutes rub off and wash the skin. This removes every trace of hair and leaves the skin firm and smooth.

Mrs. Rob.: Straggly eyebrows can be made to come in thick and silky if pyroxin is applied occasionally with forefinger. For short lashes, apply pyroxin at base of lashes with forefinger and thumb, and they will grow long and curly. Be careful not to get any pyroxin where no hair is wanted.

Edith: Aching eye-muscles do not indicate a pressing need for glasses. Try this harmless eye-tonic and I am sure you will find prompt relief: In 1 pint clear, cold water dissolve 1 ounce crystos, then each day put 2 or 3 drops of this in the eyes. The crystos eye-tonic is especially nice for granulated lids and to remove foreign particles. To dull eyes, it gives a delightful sparkle and expression.

Aleda: Perspiration will not cause your hair to become "mussy" and unmanageable if you shampoo frequently with canthrox. Just dissolve a teaspoonful of canthrox in a cup of hot water and you will have sufficient mixture for a thorough cleansing. Canthrox creates a wealth of thick, creamy lather that gently and completely removes every atom of dust, dandruff and excess oil. Its use keeps the scalp clean and healthy, and insures an abundance of brilliant hair, even in color and of a soft, silken fluff. After a canthrox shampoo the hair dries quickly and is easy to do up in any style.

Mrs. R. M.: You must discard powder and greasy creams, because these clog the pores and cause the skin to grow rough, blotchy, oily and freckled. Using this simple, inexpensive lotion will soon clear your skin and give to it that delightful youth-tint so much admired. Into ½ pint witch hazel (or hot water) stir 2 teaspoonfuls glycerine, then add 4 ounces spurmax. Apply sparingly to the skin and rub lightly until dry. The spurmax lotion is invisible when on and imparts a velvety smoothness to the skin. It is especially fine for hot weather, because perspiration does not spot it, nor does it rub off.

O. J. R.: Your system craves a cleanser and tonic. Into ½ pint alcohol pour 1 ounce kardene, then add ½ cupful sugar and hot water to make a quart. A tablespoonful before meals is the dose, and a course of this treatment will eliminate all poisons from the body, build up wasted, worn tissues and give to you full health, strength and energy. This tonic is particularly good for lost appetite and that tired, ... feeling. Keeping the ... in ... handy ... occasional use ... often ... serious sickness and doctor's bills.

NATIONAL COMPETITION OF BOY SCOUTS TO BE HELD IN WASHINGTON

Scouts in Different Parts of the Country Are Expected to Participate in Scout Activities in the National Capital in September, in Connection With the International Congress of Hygiene and Demography

A national competition among the Boy Scouts of America will be held in Washington from September 25 to 29 in connection with the International Congress of Hygiene and Demography. It will bring together all scouts from different parts of the country, permitting them to engage in different scouting contests. During the two weeks of the competition the boys will camp near the monument grounds, and there daily work will be studied by the physicians attending the congress of hygiene.

Colin H. Livingstone, president of the Boy Scouts of America, is enthusiastic over the national competition. Details are being worked out by James E. West, chief scout executive of the Boy Scouts of America, and E. S. Martin, scout commissioner of Washington. They have arranged prizes for the scouts and a variety of contests, all of which will provide much fun and at the same time give the boys of different sections of the country an opportunity to become acquainted with one another.

The competition will be based chiefly on the work of a patrol comprising eight boys. There will be trophies for the local council of the city whose patrol wins first, second or third place. There will be individual prizes for the scout winning the highest number of points and for the boys who win second and third places. The contests being arranged will include scouting activities. First there will be knot tying. Two points are allowed for every knot that a scout ties and names correctly. Duplication of knots will not be permitted. Another contest will be fire lighting without matches. The scout who makes a fire in three minutes wins twenty-five points. The scout who will make a fire in five minutes wins twenty points. Another contest will be water boiling, and the scout who brings water to the boiling point in six minutes wins twenty-five points; in eight minutes, 20 points. Every scout who swims fifty yards wins twenty-five points; forty yards, twenty points, and so on. For swimming on his back twenty-five yards the scout gets twenty-five points. There will be also [illegible] signaling events. If any scout can send sixteen letters a minute in any code he wins [illegible] points. If he sends thirty-five letters a minute he wins twenty-five points. There will be contests in the [illegible] of pictures, [illegible] first aid.

Another important part of the contest will be the daily inspection. The director of the camp will make his round at least once a day without giving any notice beforehand. He will take into consideration the cleanliness of the tent of each patrol. The patrol that each day has its tent in the best condition will receive fifteen points. The competition promises to be a rousing affair. All scoutmasters desiring to enter a patrol for the competition should send to E. S. Martin, scout commissioner, Washington, D. C., for entry blanks.

POLISH BOYS ORGANIZE SCOUT TROOP

Forty Polish boys have organized a boy scout troop in Buffalo, N. Y., and meet every Wednesday evening in Dom Polinski hall for the usual scout marching drills, signaling and other details of practice prescribed in the code for the tenderfoot who wishes advancement. Mrs. Joseph Kudlicka has been trying to interest older men in the project of forming a local council. Those who have been especially active in assisting the troop thus far are Alexander Szczukowski, Edward Partyka and James M. Rozan. The boys are now meeting weekly and taking long hikes in the country under the direction of Polish Leaders Michael Witkowski and Josey Sarnowski, who had the regular scoutmaster's training. One of the wonders of the Polish troop is the steady interest shown by the boys and the fact that few of them have the suits and other equipment.

BOY SCOUTS WORK FAITHFULLY FOR SCOUT DEGREES

The leaders of the Boy Scouts of America insist that the boys must perform thoroughly every requirement for the different badges of the scout degrees. They make exceptions at times in the case of cripples when the boys are absolutely unable to fulfill a certain requirement, but when they show remarkable qualities in other directions. When a boy is thoroughly sound and permits an obstacle of some sort to prevent him from fulfilling a requirement, no exception is made to his case. For instance, Frank P. Barrows, scoutmaster of a troop in Nordhoff, Ventura county, Cal., wrote a letter about a second-class scout who failed to qualify as a first-class scout simply because he could not swim. The reason he could not swim is because he lives in a canyon where there is no opportunity to learn. "He is a fine fellow," wrote Borrows, "and can come up to every test except that of swimming. May we substitute some other requirement?" In reply James E. West, chief scout executive wrote as follows: "I am sure that Fred would be a much better scout, as a much better man, and a greater credit to your troop if in spite of his obstacle he perfected himself for the swimming test. We have taken this action in a number of cases and afterwards the scoutmasters have been very glad that we did so. I will not definitely settle your case at this moment, but will gladly present it to our committee for consideration. Meanwhile I would advise, however, that you give me good reasons for making the exception if you still desire this to be done."

BADEN-POWELL'S IMPRESSION OF AMERICAN BOYS

Sir Robert S. S. Baden-Powell, after six weeks spent in America, was especially impressed by the American boys. He visited probably 75,000 or 100,000 boy scouts of America and had an opportunity to scrutinize the boys carefully and closely. "The American boy," he writes as a result of his visit, "is singularly bright, self-reliant and sharp beyond his years, as compared with his European brother. He is splendid material if there were only added to it a character for self-control, discipline, thoroughness, chivalry and capability for sticking to his job. His good qualities I could see for myself, but my attention was drawn to his defects by numbers of Americans having different points of view from which to judge him.

"These were men who saw value in scouting, which I had not previously realized.

"I had thought that in the case of British boys, and still more in the case of some of our continental neighbors, the training might be expected to help the development in them of manliness, self-reliance, alertness and other such qualities, whereas in the American boy these already appear to exist.

"But it was shown to me that, whereas the old world boy may want pushing on and waking up, the new world boy rather needs holding in, and the inculcation of discipline and the sense of duty to others which he does not otherwise get. So if scouting really helps to bring about some of these it will be a work of national value."

DOCTOR PRAISES FIRST AID WORK OF BOY SCOUTS

Crawford R. Green, who has been giving instruction in first aid to the boy scouts of Troy, N. Y., in the last two years, was greatly pleased over the knowledge which the boys have acquired and their interest in such work. "The boy scouts," he says, "understand the hygiene of their bodies and of the home and the camp; they are able to improvise surgical dressings for every kind of surgical accident; they can cope with every emergency in which a knowledge of first aid work can be of avail; they know how to control hemorrhages, how to treat burns, how to rescue persons from live electric wires, how to treat sunstroke and frostbite, how to resuscitate the drowned, what to do in case of poisoning, how to rescue persons from burning buildings, how to make temporary dressings for fractures and reduce dislocations; in short, how to relieve suffering and prevent death wherever this is possible without the expert knowledge of the physician. These boys are not merely instructed in this work, but, with the facility possible only at their receptive age, they retain for ready use the knowledge which they acquire. It has been demonstrated time and again that the boy scouts are alert and ready to meet the responsibilities thrown upon them in times of great emergency."

SCOUTMASTERS MAY WIN MERIT BADGES

The leaders of the Boy Scouts of America have decided to award merit badges to scoutmasters as well as to scouts. Hitherto merit badges were given only to first-class scouts for excellency in various lines of scouting and useful activities. Scoutmasters, however, have taken delight in qualifying in various lines of activities, such as signaling, swimming and the like, with the idea of stimulating the boys to greater exertion, and the scout leaders have decided to grant them badges. Milton B. Sackett of River Edge, N. J., was the first scoutmaster to make formal application for merit badges.

BALTIMORE SCOUTS SAVE SNAKE

The Boy Scouts of Baltimore do not believe in killing snakes. The rule against killing was enforced recently at the Baltimore Boy Scouts camp at Harper's Ferry. A farmer a few days ago was about to kill a blacksnake when Rev. J. W. H. Beale, scoutmaster of the Hampden troop, came along and explained to the farmer what a benefit such a snake was to him. The boys are being taught the difference between snakes that are dangerous and those that kill insects and perform good service for farmers.

BOY SCOUT NOTES

The Boy Scouts of Greenfield, Ind., are rejoicing in the comradeship of Red Fox, a Sioux Indian, who takes them on hikes, shows them how to camp Indian style and teaches them Indian war dances.

The Boy Scouts of Baton Rouge who gave efficient service in that city in the recent floods have received six tents as a reward from the legislative committee of Louisiana which had charge of the relief work.

Plans are being made by business men of Tulsa, Okla., to send 100 Boy Scouts of America on a trip to Washington, New York and various eastern cities. The business men are chipping in. Already a good-sized fund has been arranged. Boy scouts have done so much excellent work in Tulsa that the citizens feel that they should give them a vacation as a reward.

LEPER QUARANTINE

From the New York Herald.

Occasionally quite a sensation is produced by the news that a case of leprosy has been discovered in the United States. The last case is a leper who came from Russia three years ago. It is quite certain that he was suffering from the disease when he came, and very probable that there were already some recognizable symptoms of the disease, but he entered from Canada and immigration inspection, deficient enough at its best, is so relaxed at the border that he easily obtained entrance.

In spite of the popular dread of the disease, it may be said at once, however, that there is almost no danger of the contagion of leprosy from casual contact. Only after prolonged and intimate relations with lepers is the disease conveyed. Experience shows as a rule at least five years of close association with them is required before contagion is possible.

Physicians do not hesitate to engage in professional contact with lepers. While lepers must not be allowed to live among our people unless the disease is to be permitted to become endemic in the country, the discovery of scattered cases does not justify the usual thrill of dread over the disease.

A private bill has been introduced into the Japanese diet to grant criminals condemned on a capital charge the privilege of committing "seppuku" instead of meeting their fate by the hangman's rope. "Seppuku" or "happy dispatch," is another name for "harakiri," or suicide.

HAPPENINGS IN THE WORLD OF SPORT

Johnson One Fighter Who Never Extended Himself

By W. W. NAUGHTON.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 10.—Jack Johnson says he has retired and it remains to be seen whether he means it. At present his resolve is of an adamantine character. He swears that the world will never hear him say as "John L. Sullivan said, 'I tried once too often,'" and that never hereafter will the lure of gold bring him back to the ring as it brought Jeffries back, when he was far past his athletic prime. The writer believes Johnson is out of the game to stay. The heart knows its own bitterness and no one knows better than Johnson what rough riding it was with Fireman Jim Flynn at Las Vegas.

Two years ago Johnson would have gently spanked Flynn for his bad manners. As it was, the best Johnson could do was hold on and beg for help. Two years of acquaintance with the Paris cafes, and the pleasure haunts of London told in Johnson's case just as similar alliance [illegible] done in the case of Peter Jackson. When the state police were clambering into the ring in New Mexico and Tom Smith was mopping his perspiring brow, a little bird whispered in Jack Johnson's ear, "The time is ripe for retiring."

And who can blame him? He has acquired a competence through the use of his gloves and now that he feels he is not as spry, or as sure fisted as he used to be, he is showing good judgment in sidestepping possible disaster. Because other champions made mistakes is no reason why Johnson should. In getting out at this time Johnson is clinging to an ambition he has long had, even though he may not have given expression to it. He would dearly like to be known as the only negro to hold the world's championship and then retired undefeated.

Kept Away From Langford.

In support of this view it is only necessary to recall Johnson's attitude toward other colored fighters since he became champion. It is claimed that he deliberately backed out of a match with Sam Langford in London after signing contracts. He has been a veritable will o' the wisp to Joe Jeannette, who has been after him for a long time. He has often talked of going to Australia to box Langford and McVea, but judging by his actions he was never for an instant sincere in [illegible].

If the last has really been seen of Johnson as a pugilist, he will be remembered as a fighter who was seldom, if ever fully extended. Some say that his fight with Tommy Burns in Australia was his hardest. This may be so. He certainly never had any hard bouts in the ordinary acceptance of the term, in this country. His go with Jeffries, from which so much was expected, was so extremely one-sided that it lives in memory as the joke of the century.

Johnson's style of boxing was all his own. He was master of the straight left and right crosses that conceited boxers usually employ, but he seldom relied upon them. In the use of hooks, upper cuts and lifting punches generally he probably never had an equal.

Arguments frequently arise as to how Johnson would have fared if he had been sent against a Queensberry crackerjack like Peter Jackson, when the latter was at his best. Well, there is no harm in forming and holding an opinion on the point, but right there the discussion ends. It is a sporting aphorism that it is hopeless to argue any matter that cannot be settled by a test, and certainly there is no way of determining which was the better man, Peter Jackson or Jack Johnson. The remark is often heard that Johnson was lucky—that when he reached his prime there were really no good heavyweights in sight. That is true in a measure, but it is the luck of the game. It very often happens that staleness and long service contribute to a champion's defeat as much as anything else.

Heavyweights Were Scarce.

In the heavyweight division, it was seldom in recent years that two really good men developed about the same time. Possibly the best instance of genuine rivalry in this respect was when Jeffries and Sharkey were working to the front. No more stubborn engagements than the two in which Jim and Tom were the principals were ever witnessed probably, and if Sharkey had had a few inches more of stature, ring history might have had an entirely different twist.

Who will be Johnson's successor? Some people do not see much hope for the [illegible] because Langford, McVea and Jeannette are still active. But these colored gladiators are not by any means as youthful as they used to be and as there is no negro novice in sight, there is good reason for arguing that a white man will rule the heavyweight roost within the next couple of years.

From the word that comes to me from friends in New York, I can say that English Bombardier Wells is not considered out of the championship running by any means. It would be a notable thing if England landed a world's boxing champion after all these years. Recently the country named won back the world's sculling premiership after the title had been monopolized by Australia and Canada for what seemed like a generation or two.

If the old country were to meet with equal success in the boxing line it would probably light bonfires on Albion's headlands, and Kipling would feel constrained to write a new national "poem."

RIO GRANDES COMING TO PLAY THOSE ZOOZ TODAY

There is no telling what will happen when the Zooz and the Denver Rio Grandes get under way at the Zoo yard this afternoon, but the press agent's dope is that it will be a good game of ball. The game will be a sort of rubber, each bunch of athletes having won two games in the series of four played. Van Stone, who has lost but one game this season, and that to the Grandes, will be on the hill this afternoon for the locals, and probably Spot Gault will work for the invaders. In an effort to build up his infield, Gault will use Howard Fowler at short. He is a brother of "C." demon first baser, and he's quite a scooper, believe us. Watch the little flag on the corner and remember the Sabbath games begin at 2:15, mountain time. Line-up:

Rio Grandes—Rollins, 3b; Leisenring, 2b; Smith, cf; Winkler, rf; Zeitz, rf; Bahl, 1b; Schweiger, ss; Vandergrift, lf; Gault, p.

Elks Defeat Pikes Peak Club 9 to 5

The ball tossers of the Elks club demonstrated their superiority over the Pikes Peak club aggregation at Washburn field yesterday afternoon, winning by a score of 9 to 5. Vic Davis was on the hill for the Pikes Peak team, and his pals declare would have won had they been able to give him anything like 14-karat support. There were a couple of weak spots in the losers' lineup, however, and Mr. Davis was forced to report a setback. He was the hero at bat, and stung the ball four times in that number of trips to the plate.

Nichols worked for the Elks, and his repertoire kept the common enemy from becoming dangerous. The proceeds of the game will be donated to the Elks charity fund, and a good sum was realized. Nichols and Sonnekson constituted the Elk battery and Davis and Capen toiled for the Pikes Peak club.

CLOSE PLAY IN MATCH FOR PRAIRIE TROPHY

The first round for the Prairie cup was played yesterday afternoon at the Colorado Springs Golf club with the following results: Hagerman beat Williamson one up; Hubbell beat Gauss one up; Jewett beat Newbold, two up and one, and Gillett and Brown tied. They will play off this week, the winner meeting Jewett in the semi-finals. The other semi-finalists are Hagerman and Hubbell, who will play off next Saturday. All the matches yesterday were close and hard fought, as the scores indicate, and the result was in doubt practically up to the last hole in each match.

Following the first round for the Prairie cup, a mixed foursome was played, the cups offered being won by Mr. and Mrs. Raynor M. Gardiner, with a score of 59. Other scores were returned as follows:

U. S. TAKES FIRST HONORS IN OPENING YACHT RACES

CHICAGO, Aug. 10.—First honors in the series of yacht races between the United States and Canada at the water carnival and naval review went to the United States today.

In a thrilling race during a downpour of rain the Michicago, flying the colors of the Chicago Yacht club, defeated the Patricia, representing Canada, flashing over the finish line three lengths ahead of the Canadian challenger. The official time over the 10¾-mile course was 2:47:42. The race was followed by the annual Chicago river Marathon swim, which was won by William Vosberg of the University of Illinois in 1:03:22.

Police following the contestants in boats, rescued three unable to continue from exhaustion.

A woman, said to be a professional swimmer, leaped into the water from the Dearborn street bridge to aid a contestant whom she said she thought to be drowning.

The "contestant" proved to be her husband, also a professional swimmer. There was considerable excitement over the incident until the crowd learned the two were exhibitors at an amusement park.

M'LOUGHLIN BEATS WILLIAMS

NEW YORK, Aug. 10.—Maurice E. McLoughlin, the Californian who shared with T. C. Williams, the Pennsylvania state and national clay court champion, after five hard sets at 6-2; 6-2; 5-7; 4-6; 6-4.

CARR IS TO MANAGE A BASEBALL SCHOOL

DETROIT, Mich., Aug. 10.—A baseball college will be established somewhere in the south next winter, with a major league star at the head of every department. Charlie Carr, once first sacker for the Tigers and now manager of the Kansas City club, will be the proprietor.

Carr came to Detroit a few days ago and got the backing of President Navin for the proposition. The owners of all the other major league clubs will be invited to chip in and take part of the benefits.

The idea is to eliminate a large part of the expense of the spring training trips and at the same time furnish trained material to the owners to take into their spring camps. Instead of a manager having from 10 to 40 recruits to look after, as now is the case, he will have not more than half a dozen, perhaps only a couple, and he will know before he goes into camp just about what these youngsters can do. He will simply put them into their positions and drill them in team work instead of trying to teach them the entire game of baseball in a few weeks.

It will be necessary to raise enough capital to lease a park and pay the salaries of the "professors." The latter expense is not expected to be very great, for the teachers will be either retired former stars or present stars who will be glad to pick up $1,000 or so extra money in the winter. They will not have to play ball, but simply teach the fine points of it to the men under their charge.

The college will open in the autumn. The clubs which have grabbed off a lot of new men will send them to the college and perhaps send their managers along to keep an eye on them or to aid in the teaching, but each recruit will be taught individually by some old-time star of the position the youngster is trying for. For instance, Jennings might teach shortstopping; Cy Young and Mathewson, pitching; Cobb, baserunning and batting; Chase, first sacking, and so on.

Griffith Out After New Ball Players

By J. ED. GRILLO.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Aug. 10.—Though this year's performance of the Nationals has been most satisfactory and there would be no kick coming should Griffith stand pat with the team with which he will finish the present season, it is evident that he has no such intentions. The recruiting of the team for next season is already under way and by the time the last weeks of the campaign roll around Griffith will have as many youngsters under his care as any of the rival managers.

Three new players have already been bought. The latest purchase is Outfielder Moran of the Chattanooga club. This youngster is pictured as a speed marvel, who is as fleet of foot as Milan and is hitting the pill at a .300 clip down in the Southern league. Griffith closed the deal for him this morning. The acquisition of Moran places three young players on the Washington purchase list. Ayres, a pitcher, has been secured from Richmond, while Allen, another outfielder, who is now with Sharon, was also purchased. Every one of these players will report in the fall, but whether there will be any experimenting at that time depends entirely on what position the Nationals hold in the race at that stage of the game. If there is still hope for the pennant the youngsters, of course, will not be used, but if the fight for the flag is settled the old players will be given a rest and the youngsters put to work.

Both Mike Kahoe and Jack Ryan are scouting through the minors now and will continue to do so for the next few weeks. Griffith figures that he will have ten or twelve young players purchased before the drafting season is on, and he will most likely have a long list of drafts to file with the commission.

Griffith believes that a team can never have too many good ball players, and he proposes to look over a lot of youngsters this fall and next spring in the hope of recruiting his team with several, even if they do not play regularly.

Charlie Street, the veteran catcher acquired by the New York Americans from Washington last spring, has been sold to the Providence team of the International league.

Monte Cross, former star on the Phillies and Athletics, is a free agent. He has been handed his unconditional release by the St. Louis Americans, with which team he was assistant manager and scout.

Larned, Tennis Champion, May Postpone Retirement

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 10.—The threatened retirement of William A. Larned, the national lawn tennis champion, may be postponed after all. It is hinted that if the smiling player is satisfied with his condition after with his game in the Southampton tournament he will, after all, [illegible] in the national [illegible] at Newport next month. In the interests of sport and the good of the game it is to be sincerely hoped that the veteran will decide that he still has the strength to play through the tournament, which, according to the new rules governing the contest, the defender this and succeeding years will have to do.

What Larned's presence means in a tournament is best measured by the lack of interest that is apparent when he is absent. This year the Longwood matches somehow lacked their usual tang. Larned was not playing. The merry doings at Elsinore suffered by the unfortunate absence of Hamlet. Larned has an extraordinary grip on the tennis crowd. This grip consists of something more than the skill and ease of his strokes. Larned is a man of surprises. He always does the right thing at the right time. The man is not only a tennis tactician, a thinker of the game, [illegible] a finished artist.

The champion is always copied more or less by the aspiring youngster. And no one who has seen the younger players [illegible] can doubt that Larned's influence on American lawn tennis has been as marked as it is beneficial. [illegible] is almost a perfect [illegible] and [illegible] of the Longwood courts [illegible] Larned would any day be mistaken for his more famous brother.

New [illegible] almost [illegible] a revolution in [illegible] of carrying on the annual Rhode Island state tennis tournament [illegible] of the players who entered for that event when they got [illegible] race for the state's title yesterday morning.

First and foremost of the several changes instituted this year the state champion, [illegible] Jones, of Providence and Boston, who has won the title for six years, was required to get into the tournament on the ground floor and work his way to the top if he would [illegible] the state's interests of players another year. Jones must do as Larned must do in the defense of his national title. It would occasion no surprise, however, if the titlist's whole business in Boston makes heavy demands on his time and allows him comparatively little opportunity for consistent practice, should now retire.

STAHL AND GRIFFITH SUPPLANTING MACK?

DETROIT, Mich., Aug. 10.—Connie Mack, hero of the 1911 American League base ball season, is a back number in the popularity contests.

Griffith and Stahl are the new heroes.

Hail to the new bright lights in the baseball firmament! Their brilliancy dims the whiteness of the light that for two years illuminated fandom.

And why?

The answer is easy. Mack's team is slipping, while Stahl and Griff are leading the interesting race for the league pennant. The new heroes of the hour demand the homage of the fans.

When the Philadelphia team was here, Connie Mack was actually lonesome. His court in the hotel corridor was small and shoddy. The Old Fox, the Silent One, the Wily Mack, the Hero of Yesterday sat, or lounged about the marble hall at the Hotel Cadillac as lonesome as a traveling man in a dry town.

Nobody cared what the Wily One was thinking about; nobody sought those difficult interviews. His genial, faint grin was warped and the corners of his mouth drooped. Even the bell-hops stepped on his sprawling feet without apology.

How different from the olden days! Then Connie Mack used to lock himself in his room and sleep under the bed to keep away from admiring pests. His company was eagerly sought and his curt remarks applauded around the circuit.

Now Griff is the lone one. The man who brought the Washington team up to second place from the bottom of the ladder is greater in the estimation of the fans than the man who cannot keep his champions up at the head.

A few years ago Hughie Jennings' name was on every tongue. Hughie still enjoys more than average attention around the circuit, because Hughie is a card and he is personally popular in eight big cities, not counting Scranton, Pa.

A baseball hero, like a mere politician, is soon forgotten except for his mistakes and misdeeds.

There is a chance for Connie to "come back," but he will have to accomplish the task before he can have the calcium again.

Why, down in Akron, Ohio, where they have a Central League ball team, Connie Mack is not even known by sight. Connie went down there Wednesday to spy on a few ball players. He looked perfectly natural and healthy, but not a soul in the baseball town recognized the deposed leader of the American League. And Connie was quite out of sorts over it, too.

"Guess they were so full of Griff and Stahl, they don't remember us fellows any more," said Connie sadly.

TEAMMATES TELL WHY HORINE LOST

BOSTON, Aug. 10.—The mystery of the apparent failure of George Horine, the California wonder, to sweep away all records in the high jump at Stockholm is cleared up by explanations made by his teammates, here. It is explained that the Swedes would not permit Horine to leap in the manner by which he attained heights which dwarfed all previous records.

The Swedes contended that Horine's head was the first part of his body over the bar and insisted that the proper style was feet first.

THE AGE OF PAPER

summer she did not include any linen in the furnishings she took with her depending entirely upon paper towels napkins and table cloths

Improved In Appearance

It is possible to secure paper plates in a number of sizes as well as oval dishes for serving vegetables while there is seemingly endless variety in paper cups which may be made to serve in place of both cups and drinking glasses There is no danger of loss from breakage and they are light to handle A meal served upon paper dishes requires little work afterwards The dishes and scraps are all gathered in the table cloth and thrust into the fire so dish washing is absolutely avoided

The increased demand for paper dishes has led to much improvement in their appearance While the plain white ones are satisfactory to most people this year has brought out some exceedingly pretty styles with floral and other decorative designs. A luncheon served from these dishes set upon a bare table decorated with tell paper lace doilies is attractive enough for the most critical eye

Perhaps the newest development of paper utility in the home is the paper bag cookery which is now so much talked of It has become so well established that a new encyclopedia discusses the subject, going back to the time of the Romans when the highly prized mullet was prepared by being cooked in a paper envelope in order that all of its juices might be preserved Practically every article of food can be prepared in paper bags made for that purpose and the natural flavors and juices are so well preserved that experts praise this method as the best cooking process

Couple to Jail for Allowing Child to Die Without Medical Care

By GEORGE DUFRESNE

PARIS, Aug. 10.—Antoine, the former leader of the Christian Scientists though dead still exercises a fatal influence over his followers in France. The other day the commissary of police in the Sorbonne quarter was informed that permission to bury an infant of four months, Marie Augustine Leclercq had been refused. The magistrate went to the address given him—4 Rue de la Parcheminerie—a hovel occupied by a certain Jules Leclercq and his mistress, Mathilde Santos. He found the mother and father on their knees by the bedside of their dead child. Everything in the room was filthy, and the doctor who accompanied the magistrate announced, after an examination that the child had died from lack of medical attention

The parents freely acknowledged that they had called in no medical aid for their child, who had been ill for eight days When asked the reason of their criminal neglect they replied We are the faithful followers of Antoine the leader, and we hold that God alone has the power, if he will, to save and to cure The Most High preferred to call our beloved child to himself His will be done"

This explanation which proved that the parents of the dead child belonged to the Belgian edition of the sect of Christian Scientists, founded by Antoine the Healer, did not satisfy the magistrate Leclercq and his mistress were arrested, and the body of the dead child taken to the morgue for the autopsy. Inquiries showed that another child of whom Leclercq was not the father, died in June for lack of medical care Leclercq and his mistress who were looked upon in the neighborhood with suspicion as eccentric people, have been sent to prison

ARREST ENGLISH STUDENTS FOR A PRACTICAL JOKE

BERLIN Aug. 10.—A party of 30 foreign students, said to be for the most part English, came into conflict with the Dresden police last night as the result of attempting to reproduce on German soil the practical jests that are winked at in English university towns

One of them climbed the Bismarck statue and placed in the hand of the figure of the statesman a tankard full of beer A policeman who hurried up and wished to take the names of the revelers was mobbed His whistles, however called up police reserves who conveyed the students to the police station
